Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

Never before in the British nation, if in the history of any country, has a sovereign reigned so long, so successfully, so gloriously, as has now our beloved Queen Victoria. On Tuesday, June 22nd she completed the sixtieth year of her glorious reign. No sovereign ever reigned more universally in the hearts of her subjects. None ever before reigned over such a vast extent of territory, extending as it now does to every continent of the globe. None ever before reigned over such vast millions of people, her subjects now including nearly one third of the entire world's population.

It is fitting that the sixtieth anniversary of such a reign should be commemorated by a Diamond Jubilee. Such a jubilee the world has never before seen. The Queen's own subjects, of every quarter of the globe, of nearly every race and clime, of nearly every creed and class, have united spontaneously and enthusiastically in this grand jubilee. Even the foreign nations have also joined with unusual enthusiasm.

The Jubilee day in London, on Tuesday, was a memorable epoch in the World's history. Never before, we believe, were so many people gathered together at one place, and all has passed off in peace and harmony. We doubt if in any other country could there be such a vast gathering with safety. The whole gathering and festivals are more suggestive of the millennium than any thing has ever been—of Peace on Earth and good will among men.

We have not space to give anything like an extended report of these grand jubilee proceedings. The broad sheets of our largest dailies have not been found ample for all that should be written. In that grand demonstration in London, on Tuesday, the following countries were officially represented, every one a portion of the British empire: Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, Cape of Good Hope, Tasmania, Natal, India, Ceylon, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malta, Gibraltar, Cyprus, Borneo, British Guinea, Jamaica, Mauritius, Rhodsea. These foreign nations, too, were officially represented and vied with each other in their sincere respect to Britain's Queen: Prussia, Russia, Denmark and Norway, Belgium, Egypt, Naples, Italy, Saxony, Holland, the United States.

In all these vast demonstrations Canada was highly honored. We have only space here to give the cab'e message sent that day to the people of Canada through Lord Aberdeen our Governor General, and his reply in behalf of the Canadian people:

The Queen's Message.

"Buckingham Palace, London, June 22.

"The Governor-General of Canada, Ottawa, 11.07 a.m.: From my heart I thank my beloved people. May God bless them. (Signed) VICTORIA R. and I."

Canada's Reply.

"To the Queen, London:

"Ottawa, Tuesday, 6.12 p.m., 11.12 Greenwich time.—The Queen's most gracious and touching message, this moment received, shall immediately be made known to all your Majesty's people throughout the Dominion, and will stir afresh the hearts already full on this memorable day. We offer the glad tribute of loyal devotion and affectionate homage. God bless and save the Queen. (Signed) ABERDEEN, Governor-General."

Never have all Canadians united more loyally with their fellow British subjects the world over in singing,

Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us;
God save the Queen.

Jubilee Concert.

There was a large and fashionable audience at the Eastern Methodist church on Tuesday evening, but not nearly so many as the merit of the concert and the time and talent put forth by Mr. W. A. Rockwell in its production should have called out. For weeks past the choir and a chorus of 250 voices were in training, and we doubt if ever a greater musical treat has been provided our music loving citizens by local talent. Throughout the programme was especially suitable to the memorable occasion.

Dr. Ward, Mayor, presided, and introduced the programme in a few carefully prepared remarks, showing the advance that had been made during the Victorian era.

Rev. Dr. McDiarmid gave an address on "Our Queen," giving an interesting account of the principal traits and characteristics of Her Gracious Majesty in the family, in the church and in the state, from her birth in 1819 to the present, culminating in one of the most eventful reigns in history.

Rev. W. W. Peck took as his subject "Our Empire," and eloquently described the advancement that had been made during the past sixty years, materially (in territory and population), socially, educationally and religiously. The address represented a good deal of time spent in careful reading and research, and the pictures drawn were always dry. The gentleman engrossed the attention of all present for nearly half an hour, and presented his astonishing comparisons in a most comprehensible manner.

The musical portion of the programme left nothing to be desired. Mr. Rockwell was in splendid voice and rendered "The Diamond Jubilee Rule Britannia" in a masterly manner, the chorus bringing the audience to their feet. Miss L. Ward played the "Queen's Jubilee March" with great taste and expression and gives much promise as a pianiste. Mr. J. Fred Tilley's bass solo, "Who treads the path of Duty," from Mozart's "Il Flauto Magico, was given with an astonishing power, giving full scope for his rich lower notes. Mrs. F. E. Vanluven and Mrs. Cortland Wartman sang solos, which showed them to possess real generous applause. The former is an acknowledged favorite and gives the musical talent with which she has been so generously endowed with an unstinted hand for every good cause. Mrs. Wartman is new to many of us as a soloist, but we hope to have the pleasure of hearing her charming voice on future occasions.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the choir, its popular director, and all concerned in the concert and decoration are to be congratulated on the success of the affair.

We should not overlook the work of the organist, Miss Emma Bennett. Her duties were by no means light, and at the services on Sunday and during the evening she played to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

She is making marked progress as an organist.

Not the least pleasing of the many pleasing features of the evening was the presentation to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. McDiarmid, of an address, purse of money and a silver water service. Mr. Stephen Gibson, County Registrar, making the presentation, and prefacing it with an eloquent peroration.

Following is the address, to which the Rev. Dr. replied in feeling terms on behalf of Mrs. McDiarmid, and himself:

REV. N. A. McDIARMID, S. T. D.,
Eastern Methodist Church,
Napanee, Ont.

DEAR PASTOR,—

After three pleasant and profitable years we cannot allow our present relation of pastor and people to be broken without expressing to you our appreciation of your very excellent services, our confidence in you as a defender of the faith, and our sincere regret at your departure.

We feel that the present peaceful and prosperous state of our congregation, and the vigor and growth of the various societies in connection with our church are due in no small degree to your faithful ministrations and judicious management, and we trust that in the days to come the Lord may bless you with abundant fruit to the praise and glory of the Master.

We would also assure Mrs. McDiarmid of the warm place she has won in our hearts by her gentle and kindly manner and the christian life she has exemplified whilst going in and out among us.

As a slight token of our affection and esteem we desire to present to you and Mrs. McDiarmid the accompanying purse and silver water service, which, we trust, may serve to recall pleasant memories of the many warm friends you have in Napanee. With this memento you will please accept our best wishes for renewed health and future success, and we pray that the God of all grace, who has blessed your efforts in the past, may crown them with still greater success in your new sphere of labor. In His loving kindness may He cause "Goodness and mercy to follow you all the days of your Life."

Signed on behalf of the congregation by the following committee:

JAMES DALY, C. H. WARTMAN,
STEPHEN GIBSON, J. N. MCKIM,
JOHN THOMSON, C. D. WARTMAN.

By request Mr. R. S. Hulett photographed the interior of the church and succeeded in getting some splendid views.

SELBY.

We have all been wondering what has happened to our village that we have had no news for a long time.

The congregations of the Methodist and St. John's churches were largely attended because of the beautiful decoration. All report them most beautiful. Rev. Mr. Limbert gave a very loyal sermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Rose are visiting in the west.

Miss Kate McGinness is home after a week at Sydenham.

Quite a number of our boys took in the excursion Thursday night.

The services in the Methodist church last Sabbath evening were of an interesting character. The Rev. Mr. Limbert had announced for a national discourse, bearing on the Diamond Jubilee. The church was very tastefully decorated with flowers which added considerably to the interest of the occasion. The sermon dealt largely with increased national greatness and increased national stability, and was listened to with great attention by a very large congregation.

If you want to buy your flour, teas, sugars, groceries of all kinds, provisions, etc., at lowest prices, quality and quantity guaranteed, go to Hamilton Armstrong, Campbell House block.

—The Orangemen of Enterprise, Croydon and Centreville will attend divine service at Knox church, Reidville, on Sunday, 11th July.

INCREASED TAXATION AND DEBT.

Thousands of well meaning Liberals all over Canada honestly believed and expected that should the Liberal party come into power there would at once be an end put to our increased annual Dominion expenditure and also to the increase of our public debt. The Liberal platform, adopted at the great party convention held in Ottawa three years ago, strongly demanded great retrenchment in our public expenditure as well as decreased taxation, and on that cry the party went to the country at the last general election. Leading speakers of the party, like Sir Richard Cartwright, Wilfred Laurier, David Mills, William Paterson and many others, pointed out that millions might be saved in the annual government's expenditure if they were in power. All this many well meaning tax payers honestly believed and fully expected. There is now a rude awakening, however.

The second annual session of our Dominion parliament under the reign of a Liberal party government has just closed; the party has now been in power a year and ample time has been given to develop all that much promised policy of retrenchment and decreased public debt. Does it now appear that the fond expectations of the Canadian tax-payers have been realized? Let the actual facts, as they now stare us in the face, tell their own story. The record is now before us and its significance should not be lost. During the session just closed we believe that larger sums of public money have been voted away than during any previous session in the entire history of our Dominion. We believe, too, that our Dominion public debt will be more largely increased this year than during any former year in our entire history. These may seem like sweeping statements, but the facts and figures are now before us. Let them tell their own story.

It was fully expected that one of the first acts of the Liberal party would be to reform, or end, the Senate. It had long been denounced as too expensive and quite useless, as then constituted. What has been done in that direction? Simply nothing at all. All the vacancies that existed when the party came into power have been filled up, and more vacancies are now needed to carry out the agreements and promises already made. Those appointed, too, have been just as strong partisans as their predecessors, the salaries just as high and all the other expenses are just as great. Who hears one word from the Liberals about the Senate now?

It was fully expected, too, that some immediate steps would be taken to diminish the number of Cabinet ministers and to reduce their heavy annual expenses. It had been pointed out for years, and years that Canada with its population of five millions had more such ministers than the United States with its sixty-five millions, or even than Great Britain. No such steps have been taken, however. On the other hand two more Cabinet ministers have been added during the late session. No reduction has been made either in the salaries of these officials, as was at one time fully expected by many. On the other hand, we have now good reason to expect that at least $4,000 a year will soon be added to these expenses.

The system of iron and other similar bounties had been for years denounced as little better than the downright robbery of the farmers and others for the aggrandizement of the miners and furnace owners. It was fully expected by many that the "odious bounty system" would soon end under Liberal party rule. On the other hand at least one-third has already been added to these heavy burdens of the tax-payers. The Dominion bounty on every ton of Canadian pig iron was $2; the new Government has now increased it to $3. The others have been left remaining just as they were. Last year, according to the Auditor General's report, $169,214.53 were paid out of the Dominion treasury as bounty on pig iron and steel billets. We may probably look for at least another hundred thousand a year expenditure in connection with this much denounced system.

The railway subsidy system had also been bitterly denounced as simply reckless and ruinous, and many expected that an end would at once come to any such system. On the other hand millions and millions have thus been voted out during the last session at the demand of the present government. The Crow's Nest Railway—an entirely new scheme with the government—has got $3,630 00, and it was generally understood that the Canadian Pacific railway would have built that line anyway, even had no bonuser been granted. It is simply an extension of that road in a very profitable direction. It ends just where an extension on through to the Pacific coast will soon be need-ed. In fact, it is already demanded, and that represents a demand for several millions more.

The Interco'onial railway from Quebec to Montreal is also a new scheme of the present Government, representing an additional expenditure of millions. This road has for years been a heavy burden to our tax-payers. The expenses in addition to our public debt of about seven millions dollars. We had expected that the Interconial will pay any better with this enormous additional burden? It has not yet paid; the deficit averaging over $100,000 every year. We need not expect anything much better now. It is one of three lines from Montreal to Quebec, and less than forty miles shorter than either of the others. It is also but one of three lines to the Maritime provinces and over a hundred miles longer than the C.P.R. to the same points. It is a well known fact there is not yet enough paying business to warrant any such addition to our through lines.

About three millions have been also voted to other railways, including one into the dairy river section, and to several other points yet scarcely settled and hardly developed at all.

The new Fast line of Atlantic steamers comes in for half a million a year at least, being, an increase of more than $300,000 a year over and above all previous expenses in that line. It is an entirely new scheme of this Government, and is hotly denounced and strongly opposed by some of the ablest supporters in the House. What possible advantage can the tax-payers of Ontario derive from any such enormous increase of its burdens?

When the estimates for this year were laid before the House the expectation was there would be some very important reductions, much to the relief of the country. These expectations were not realized, however. The Liberal leaders, when in opposition, often assured the people that the Conservative party had annually expended $8,000,000, when they came into power in 1878, and increased it to $38,132,006 in 1895; the intimation was that these annual burdens might be again reduced to something near the old time figure. That illusion was soon dispelled, however. The first estimates brought down this year were for $38,111 663; the Supplementary estimates brought down last week represented over a million more. Sir Richard Cartwright in his very able speech during the budget debate, plainly told the tax payers of the country that they must hereafter provide for about forty millions.

The public debt, too, was to be decreased; but as a matter of fact, the increase this year will, we believe, be the largest in our history. When the budget speech was made the announcement was of a probable increase to it of between six and seven millions. Since that the Crow's Nest scheme added nearly four millions more, the Interco'onial extension scheme another six or seven millions, the new fast Atlantic steamer scheme represents between one and two millions more, the Rainy river railway scheme, over another million, and so it has gone on to the very last days of the session that the money could be voted away. It is now computed that during the session something over ninety-eight millions of money or permanent new obligations were voted out. We have had nothing like it in our history before.

Increased taxation, increased annual expenditure, greatly increased public debt. This is our first year's experience of Liberal party rule, and a bitter disappointment it has proved.

POSTSCRIPT.—Since the foregoing was in type the Senate has defeated the Interco'onial railway extension bill, involving as it does the annual addition to our expenditure of $210,000. We heartily approve of this act of the Senate, and will have more to say regarding it in the future. The government rushed this measure through the Commons before the country had any time to express an opinion. It cannot now come up again till next year.

HER MAJESTY has bestowed the following honors on Canadian Statesmen: Hon. Sir Donald Smith, G.C.M.G., a Peerage; Hon. Wilfred Laurier, membership of her Majesty's Privy Council, and the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; Hon. Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. REV. CALEB PARKER.

The following is a brief sketch of the Rev. C. Parker, recently appointed to the Western Methodist church here:

He is a native of the city of Worchester, England. He spent several of his early years in Scotland, after which he labored in the Methodist ministry in the Province of Nova Scotia, where he remained twelve years. He then spent six years in ministerial work in Prince Edward Island, which he was transferred to the Bay of Quinte Conference. He was three years at Campbellford where he was successful and popular. For the past four years he has been at Bowmanville.

The Bowmanville News of this week contains the following regarding Mr. Parker's farewell sermon last Sunday:

The Victorian Era was largely the subject of Rev. C. Parker's discourse at the Methodist church on Sunday evening last, and was brim full of interest. There was no special farewell sermon, for reasons which both pastor and people well understood. The rev. gentleman asked as a favor that none of his congregation would bid him good-bye. Nevertheless the parting is keenly felt by the whole congregation. Mr. Parker, during the year and a-half—which has gone all too soon—has endeared himself from the very first to the hearts of his people, and this feeling has strengthened as the years passed by. Not only as pastor of the Methodist church, but as a citizen, in all the interests which affect the welfare and prosperity of the town, in public or private life, he has been one of the people. Mr. Parker is a christian gentleman, in every sense of the word, an able and forceful speaker, a faithful pastor and a man among men. His unassuming, genial, kindly manner, has won not only the esteem of his own congregation but of every denomination in town, and of all classes of the community. He and his estimable wife and family will be greatly missed.

—At the close of the service, on Sunday evening, Dr. W. E. Tilley read the following resolution which was passed at the last meeting of the Official Quarterly Board, and asked the congregation to endorse it. Mr. Trebilcock seconding the resolution: "That this board records its high appreciation of the labors of our esteemed Bro. Rev. C. Parker, amongst us for the past four years, and its regret that we are now called upon to sever the tie between us as pastor and people. During his sojourn with us, Bro. Parker has not only won the affections of his own people, but also the esteem of the whole community. He and Mrs. Parker will ever be welcome to the homes of their numerous friends in Bowmanville. On behalf of the whole congregation, we convey to them our sincerest wishes for their future welfare and prosperity. God be with you till we meet again."

The congregation approved of the motion by all standing and singing "Bless be the tie that Binds."—Bowmanville News.

Mr. Parker will arrive to-day, and will commence his pastoral work on Sunday, occupying his pulpit both morning and evening. Special music is being prepared by the choir for the evening service which is a very profitable and delightful evening is looked for.

A PECULIAR CASE.

DISTRESSING RESULTS FOLLOWING VACCINATION.

A Young Daughter of David McHardy, of Fergus, the Victim Has Suffered the Most Intense Agony—Doctors Failed to Help Her.

From the Fergus Review.

Nearly every person in this section is acquainted with Mr. David McHardy, the popular leader of St. Andrew's church choir, Fergus. Our reporter called upon Mr. McHardy at his home on Upper Nichol recently, and from him and his estimable wife a tale of terrible suffering was elicited, suffering that that has brought a once exceptionally strong and healthy child to the verge of the grave. The subject of the sketch, Lulu M. Hardy, is fourteen years of age and her parents say she has not grown any since her illness began some two years and a half ago. Her terrible suffering dates from the time she was vaccinated in June, 1895, and what she has since undergone has aroused the deepest sympathy of all the friends of the family. In conversation with Mr. McHardy and his wife, the following facts were elicited:—"Two years ago last June," said the father, "Lena was vaccinated by a doctor in Fergus. The arm was very sore and swollen all summer, and because so bad that it was a mass of sores from the shoulder to the elbow. About Sept. 1895, a large lump appeared on her back, one of those things the doctor who vaccinated her, treated for all that summer, calling it a carbuncle, but the medicine he gave her did no good and she was growing weaker and weaker. When the lump broke out on her back another about was consulted, who said she was in a very low state of health. Her constitution appeared to be completely undermined, and her appetite had completely failed. The last doctor called in gave some outward applications, and caused the gathering, but it did not give the patient any benefit. Nine such gatherings have appeared since that time, but each broke and disappeared in the same regard, only however, to be followed by another. The child became very puny, and little or no food would remain on her stomach. At night she would faintly rave with the pain in her arm and back, and consequently her trouble was aggravated by a loss of sleep. She had the best of attendance left to no avail, and she was slowly but surely wasting. Friends advised a treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and as a last resort they were tried. To the surprise of both parents and friends began to improve soon after beginning the use of the pills. Her appetite returned, she became stronger and her general health much improved. The sores have not yet left her back and arm, but a complete cure is being very quickly improved under the treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that her parents are so long for a complete cure. Mr. and Mrs. McHardy thank Pink Pills for the present improvement in their child, as they have done her more good than the scores of bottles of doctor's medicine which she took.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood builder and nerve restorer. They supply the blood with its life and health giving properties, thus driving disease from the system. There are numerous pink-colored imitations against which the public is warned. The genuine Pink Pills can be had only in boxes the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all others.

CHATHAM NEWS.

Proposed Cleveland-Rondeau Lake Route Struck by Lightning.

Chatham, Ont., June 19.—Messrs. M. Burton and Chas. Cameron, of Collingwood, arrived in the city Monday, and have had a consultation with Mr. J. J. Ross, general manager of the E. and H. in regard to the proposed Cleveland-Rondeau Lake route. Though the season is quite late for navigation, the steamers to Cleveland, they are favorably impressed with the prospects.

During the heavy thunderstorm yesterday afternoon Mr. Kingsley and Harry Huffman, of Pardoville, had a narrow escape from death. They were returning to their homes after having delivered a load of straw at Purdy's siding on the L. E. and D. R. Ry. When the storm came up they took shelter under a large shade tree, opposite Mr. Handford's house. A heavy electrical discharge struck the tree, and both were knocked down. Kingsley was rendered speechless and helpless while Huffman was benumbed for some time. Huffman felt the shock quite severely, but escaped with less injury than his companion.

One of the oldest and most esteemed residents of Raleigh passed away last evening in the person of Mr. Wm. Jordan, at the decease of nearly 90 years of age.

Yesterday morning while the Owen was towing the schooner Azov, loaded with lumber, through the mouth of the river a serious accident occurred. The schooner struck the dump scow of the dredge Mudlark. Both crafts were badly injured, and suits for damages will be the result.

ARRESTED AT BLYTH.

Serious Position of a Prominent Citizen—His Wife and Mother-in-law.

Toronto, June 19.—A great sensation was created in Blyth today, when Jessop, a prominent citizen of that place, his wife and his mother-in-law, Mrs. McIlroy, were arrested at the instance of Detective Patrick Hefferman.

The cause of arrest dates back to last fall. Jessop was then running a general store in Blyth under the firm name of Jessop & Co. In November the firm assigned to Richard Tew, but the creditors did not find the facts to be as they expected, the assets showing up much smaller than the liabilities. A suspicion of crooked dealing was aroused, and under the direction of Mr. Shaw, of Smellie & Shaw, Detective Hefferman had been working on the case, and has secured evidence upon which he caused the arrest to day.

Among other charges are conspiracy to defraud creditors and receiving goods for the purpose of defrauding creditors.

It is alleged that, acting under a search warrant, goods from the store were found hidden away, done up in the original packages.

The date for the preliminary investigation has not yet been fixed.

A Millionaire's Nasty Habit.

San Francisco, June 17.—W. B. Bradbury, the millionaire, will have to serve the sentence of twenty-four hours' imprisonment in the county gaol imposed upon him by Judge Low recently, on his conviction for the second time for spitting in street cars, Judge Wallace, of the Superior Court, having affirmed in the judgment.

Want Uniform Fishing Regulations.

Lockport, N.Y., June 19.—Some time ago the Niagara County Anglers' Club communicated with the Canadian Marine and Fisheries Department, asking that the Canadian laws be modified so as to place American and Canadian fishermen on the Niagara river and the lake near Youngstown on an equal basis. At present the laws of both the United States and Canada operate jointly against American fishermen. The club to-day received what purports to be a final reply from the Canadian department, in which they absolutely refuse to make any change in the fish laws at present. The club will now ask the New York State authorities to co-operate with them in securing uniform regulations.

THE FOREST CITY.

Dairyman Killed at a Railway Crossing—General Gascoigne Inspects the Military Camp.

London, Ont., June 17.—Robert Heaman, dairyman, was fatally injured this morning at the Grand Trunk crossing at Pottersburg, about three miles east of the city. The Stratford express, leaving here about 11 o'clock, collided with Heaman's milk wagon, in which he was seated. The wagon was smashed to pieces, and Heaman was tossed into the air, and pitched some distance on the track in front of the locomotive. His left leg lay across the track, and from the knee to the foot was broken and crushed. He was removed to the city hospital, and died at three o'clock this afternoon. He leaves a widow and several children. The engine whistle was blown as usual, but as the deceased drove in a covered wagon it is unlikely that he saw or heard the train before it struck him.

Gen. Gascoigne and his aide-de-camp, Capt. McLean, will go east this evening, the former having completed his inspection of the military camp on Carling's Heights. This morning Gen. Gascoigne spent a short time among the battalions during the second parade, and afterwards he inspected the London Field Battery, R.C.I., and the different corps under canvas. He highly complimented their appearance.

Fires were built under the boilers at the new Grand Trunk car shops to-day for the first time. Full operations will be begun shortly.

There is a great demand at the post-office for jubilee stamps. The sale is expected to begin on Saturday.

SANFORD IN MEXICO.

The Defaulting Treasurer of Simcoe County Gone for Good.

Barrie, June 17.—It is now believed that County Treasurer Sanford has gone to Mexico. The auditors were at work on the books yesterday afternoon and this morning, and left on the noon train for the meeting of the County Council at Orillia, to present a preliminary report, the nature of which they did not make public. A close inspection of the books will, it is believed, reveal a very rotten state of affairs, and will lead to startling results. For instance, the auditors say that the ledger has not an auditor's check mark in it from the time Mr. Sanford took office. The amount of the shortage of course is not known, though it is placed at from $20,000 to $30,000. Among the many rumors afloat is one that no entry has been made in the cash book since May 1st, and that there is no account of moneys known to have been received since then. There is an overdraft of several thousand dollars in the bank, but this might occur with any treasurer, and only increases the financial responsibilities of the county. Mr. Sanford's salary was about $1,500 a year, and with perquisites amounted to probably nearly twice that amount. It is said the County Council will wind up his property, which shows a considerable excess of assets over liabilities, but it is not believed that such excess will nearly meet the amount of the shortage.

A Mosquito Bite.

New York, June 19.—Carmine Lepre, a boatblack, who lives on First avenue, a few days ago was bitten on the hand by a mosquito. A little welt was left on the hand, which itched. Lepre scratched it until it bled. A few hours afterward the hand began to swell and continued until it was almost twice its natural size. The swelling extended to the arm, and there were red streaks under the skin. Lepre began to experience pain in his hand and arm, and the swelling extended to his breast. Lepre was suffering from blood-poisoning, and it was arranged that an amputation should take place to-day. Last evening Lepre took to his bed and began to act as if he were out of his mind. He was transferred to Bellevue Hospital.

Disfigured Faces.

How Good Looks, Perfect Health and Pure Blood Can Be Obtained and Maintained.

Paine's Celery Compound Removes Every trace of Disease.

Is your face disfigured by eczema, pimples, blotches and blackheads? If so your blood is sluggish, impure and poisoned. While the life-stream is reeking with impurities you cannot be healthy and good looking.

If you would renew the system, cleanse the blood, and rid yourself of disease, you must use Paine's Celery Compound, the great system cleanser and blood purifier.

The following letter from Mr. D. McMahon, Peterboro, Ont., proves that Paine's Celery Compound possesses virtues and life-giving qualities unknown to many medicines and doctors' prescriptions:

"I have great pleasure in testifying to the fact that Paine's Celery Compound has worked a remarkable change in my condition.

"I was troubled with a very bad type of eczema on my face and in patches over my body for four years. I was under treatment for the same at many different periods, and had also tried many remedies, but all proved useless. At last I bought a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and put in it a little Potassium as recommended on the label. The one bottle did me so much good that I bought five bottles more, and now am perfectly cured and completely free from the troublesome disease."

PLAYING AT SIGHT.

Practice Develops and Improves Sight Reading—Helpful Hints.

The ability to perform a piece music well at first sight is often considered a natural gift, like playing from memory, although sight reading is ever the more desirable and valuable. Certainly it requires a pair of good eyes, and such as can rapidly discern all written signs. The latter act shows that the possessor of such perfect eyes concentrates his entire mind and attention upon the music before him. Another important requirement is that the player master the keyboard. But one who has his eyes habitually pinned upon the keys cannot make a good sight reader.

To come down to the point, a player's sight reading represents just what he is truly master of. Perhaps none had a more exalted opinion of it than that excellent musician, Carl Gottlieb Freudenberg of Bethlehem, who gave yearly exhibitions, in which the pupils of his school showed their actual ability by playing music at sight. The music was selected according to their respective grades. He declared that only when pupils showed what they really knew and could do, and that sight reading represents the knowledge and ability they have at their fingers' ends. A merchant might call it the cash on hand.

Practice can develop and improve sight reading. It is necessary to know all the major and minor chords and their inversions; likewise the dominant seventh chords of each key, then all the scales. Further, a thorough knowledge and feeling of time (meter and rhythm) are necessary. Practice sight reading nearly; play music of every description. Play accompaniments, instrumental duos, trios, etc.; piano duets, the first as well as second parts. Liszt was compelled by his father to play at sight every day, and no doubt this regular practice helped a great deal to enable him to perform those marvelous feats of sight reading recorded in his biographies.

Play music at sight that is a grade or two below your standing. Play it over three times. Play slowly the first time. Look at the tempo, time and key signatures. Look through the piece before starting it. Then play without stops; do not mind mistakes; correct them when you practice. Keep on; don't be afraid of approaching difficult places is the advice of a writer in Etude.

THE WOMEN OF INDIA

FAMILY AND SOCIAL RELATIONS IN THE LAND OF THE MAHATMAS.

Annie Besant Gives Her Conclusions After Investigation and Experience — High Praise For the Hindoo Woman and the Institutions to Which She Belongs.

The first point to grasp in seeking to understand the complicated problems connected with Indian womanhood is that "Indian woman" is a label that is attached to a large number of very varied classes. First, we have the Hindoo women of the four great castes, with their hundreds of subdivisions. These again vary according to localities, the women of the north and the south differing widely in their ways of life and and social customs. Next come the Mohammedan women, belonging to what is really a different world of thought, habits and family life. Then the Zoroastrian, or Parsi, women, a comparatively small but influential class. There remains a mass of unclassifiable women of the lowest working types, of mixed races, poor, ignorant, with little religion of any definite kind, often gentle and dutiful, though degraded, and with possibilities of future growth. An idea prevails largely in the west that Hindoos are polygamists. Nothing can be farther from the truth. Among all my Indian friends and acquaintances I do not know one, nor know of any one connected with them, who has more than one wife. I am told that here and there a prince may be found who is dissolute, and therefore is a polygamist, and that in rare cases a second wife is taken by a commoner, with the consent of the first, where, after years of married life, no child has been born to the home.

To die childless is a horror to the orthodox Hindoo That difficulty is more often avoided by the adoption of a near relative as a son than by the taking of a second wife while the first is living.

The ideal of marriage among Hindoos is of the truest character. The union is regarded as that of two souls suited to mate with each other, for the attainment of a spiritual end; the spiritual union being a subordinate consideration and existing for the maintenance of the family. Hence marriage in extreme youth has been favored and the boy and girl are taught to love each other and think of none other in this relation for years ere they come together as man and wife.

Another thing that has to be considered in this relation is that the Hindoo custom is "the joint family system." A man, when he marries, does not leave the family house and make a new home for himself and his wife. Such a course, from the Hindoo standpoint, destroys family life. He brings his wife home to his parents and grandparents, if living, to his as yet unmarried sisters, his brothers and their wives and families, his uncles and granduncles, with theirs, all living under the one roof, with their private rooms and common rooms, the heads of the household being the grandparents, if both are living, or the eldest son, among the next generation, and his wife after the grandfather has passed away. In such a case the widowed grandmother remains a power in the house, and nothing important is done without her consent. Very beautiful is such a family life, all the children growing up together as one huge family, and the women held in the tenderest affection and respect. The older women are the virtual rulers of the household life.

The younger women—wives or unmarried daughters—are trained by the elders, and in due time take their places, the mother being the central figure of the Hindoo twine. Disobedience to parents is the most heinous sin, and lack of reverence to the mother is well nigh unknown. Reverence to the gods, to the spiritual teacher, to the parents, is impressed from infancy on all, and "where the women are not honored" no divine blessing rests. Such is the immemorial custom, and though women speak of "independence" are beginning to mar the noble ideal of a perfect family life, myriads of happy homes remain where the old love and duti-fulness are found. "The wife is entirely subordinate to the husband!" Yes. He is her head, her beloved lord, cherished and served with untiring devotion, and the Hindoo ideal wife is a model of love, fidelity and tender obedience. She lives for him and for her children, serving also his parents, until the time comes for her to rule the household. And she is repaid by a wealth of love, of tenderness of which the western world has no idea.

Few households are without a widow, and her position has been roughly commented on by western writers. The Hindoo widow does not remarry, for death does not break the marriage bond. She leads the life most honored in India—that of the religious ascetic.

Hindoo women of two generations back were well educated for their work in life. They were trained from childhood in a knowledge of the noble Indian literature and knew by heart whole books of ethical teachings in story, parable or lofty verse. They were taught domestic management as a science, medicine, the value of food stuffs, herbs, etc. But chief of all was the training by precept and example in a spiritual view of human life, the subordination of the physical to the spiritual, the perfect discharge of duty. And we find in Hindoo homes a rare type of most gracious womanhood, divinely patient, gentle and unselfish, refined and sweet, with a delicate purity of thought and intuition, breathing out so pure an influence that the whole atmosphere grows fragrant with Put over the fire one large cup of sugar in one pint of boiling water and cook until the sugar is dissolved; add the soaked gelatine and the juice of a lemon, and remove from the fire. Rub one quart of strawberries through a colander and add them to the syrup. Strain the whole through a muslin cloth into a fluted mould with a tube in the centre. When the jelly becomes set, turn the mould on a flat dish, fill the space in the centre with whipped cream and pile some around the base of the mould. Finish with a row of fresh berries.

ANOTHER JACK THE RIPPER

FIVE PRETTY GIRLS MURDERED IN TOKIO, JAPAN.

Victims Horribly Mutilated—The Police Are Baffled and the Murderer is at Large.

San Francisco, Cal., June 17.—Mail advices from Tokio report a series of murders of the Jack the Ripper class in Japan that has carried one of the chief localities from one to the other. In the first week of May there was a series of inexplicable assassinations in one of the most thickly populated parts of Tokio, in Kanda district. There are usually about 30,000 students living in that city. During that week, three murders were committed in rapid succession in the district, the victims being young and good-looking girls. In each case the throat was cut and the victims mutilated. After the second week this district was patrolled by police in such numbers that another murder should have been impossible, yet, on two successive mornings, the bodies of young girls were found hanging to trees with their throats cut and their bodies disemboweled, making a total of five cases.

At last accounts Tokio was still in dread of the mysterious slayer, and the Japanese police confessed themselves baffled. Tokio suffered a somewhat similar visitation two years ago, when, within a week, seven women were attacked at night in the public streets. The assailant, who proved to be a crack-brained student who had been crossed in love, did not seek to kill them. His purpose seemed to be merely to slash their faces with a knife. He was captured in the act of mutilating his seventeenth victim. He was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment.

The Hinton District.

(C. M. Huyck, in Toronto News.)

The Golden Fleece gold mine is situated about two miles from Hinton. After a few minutes brisk walking along the trail leading to the mine I reached a beautiful lake, a large well brim full of water. This is a shaft thirty feet deep from which has been taken ten tons of rock. To climbing a deep ledge we came to the main shaft, which is about twenty-five feet deep and thirty feet wide and consisting of ten feet of water. The rock, which is free-milling, is a dark slate color and very rich, having tested fifteen dollars to the ton. When Taylor was operating this shaft he took out about $36,000 worth of gold, which was only 65 per cent of the amount which it contained.

The Rabstock mine, which has recently been purchased by a Toronto syndicate, is about ten feet deep and has shown some rich samples of mispickel. This mine is about three miles from Hinton, and is situated on the western edge of the mining region.

The mine which materializes the best appearance is the Peebles Antimonite mine, which is about 10 miles south of the village of Hinton and a mile east of the old Kalada road. This is not a mine proper, but a hill of mispickel and Star Antimonite, consisting of its star shaped grain. This hill reaches a height of thirty feet and by actual measurement will turn out three car loads per day for eleven years. A plant will be erected near the mine which will be run day and night, employing between seventy five and a hundred men. To saw the rock into block, eighing not less than two tons each, Sean drills will be used to bore the rock; steam derricks will load the rock at the mine and a steam engine will haul it to the village of Hinton. The road which is under constructions from the mine to the C.P.R. five miles distant, is graded to within a mile of the railway. They will begin hauling the rock next week so as to connect at the time with the C.P.R. to load three cars daily for five years begins the first of July.

DR. JACK'S WIFE

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Captain Tom," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

Ah! for the day has been a sad one. It has been terribly hot. From one of these cathedrals by some sound, and [illegible] the whirl of a steamer's screw, that churning sound he hears [illegible] rests his head to the rail and gives a [illegible] nothing [illegible] to the left, looks eagerly [illegible] to receive thrill.

[illegible] shallow still, and [illegible] swell, and not a sound [illegible] is troubled. Beneath [illegible] away back seaward, [illegible] the water; [illegible] while that churning [illegible] to ejaculate almost [illegible]

Perhaps [illegible] sometimes. If may be the [illegible] that his presence been cruising [illegible] and that while he was [illegible] and [illegible] pursuing her regular [illegible]

At any [illegible] it is a steamer which [illegible] to leave him. [illegible] from those [illegible] about [illegible] Jack has considered this [illegible] since it was just as [illegible] as a vessel in the [illegible] the day.

At [illegible] scanned the basket, and [illegible] until it promised to [illegible] a fair [illegible] or torch, when a match [illegible] and applied.

Almost [illegible] waves this flaming [illegible] a variety of extraordinary [illegible] the air. At the same time [illegible] usually stentorian [illegible] that it would never [illegible] such a fire as seem at a distance [illegible] attention. He keeps it up until [illegible] is exhausted, while [illegible] with shouting.

Then [illegible] his extreme joy that the [illegible] longer shores through the water, [illegible] to come to a stand, and [illegible] over the water to Jack's ear.

Ah! the [illegible] being lowered! Soon they [illegible] transfer up. How [illegible] Then I hunted for the captain. Inquiries [illegible] of him and you will learn that I appeared before him out of breath, and announced the sad news. The steamer was stopped, boats lowered, and we spent [illegible] in searching, but it was of no avail, and every one believed you were lost."

"Very plausible this, but subsequent investigation shows Jack that about an hour elapsed between the time of his accident and the exact minute the Englishman appeared in such a disturbed state before the captain.

It is very difficult to find the commander on board a steamer, you know. During this hour the vessel must have passed over about fifteen miles, so that the chances of their discovering Jack upon the heaving sea were about one in ten thousand.

The American pushes past, for he has no desire to continue the conversation, since his heart beats like a trip-hammer at the thought of reunion with Avis.

Hardly has he left milord than Jack runs across some one who falls upon him with vehemence, who wrings his hand like he might a pump-handle, laughing and crying the while as if hysterical.

Of course, it is Larry, and the little fellow shows his extreme pleasure in every word and look.

A few sentences from Jack gives him an idea of what happened, and then it is the doctor's turn to ask questions. He learns nothing new, but hears how Avis has suffered during the days that have elapsed since his disappearance. The full particulars he will know later. As he suspected it was by her orders the boat was sent adrift to find him if heaven was kind enough to guide the stranger, while he has ever watched over his fortunes, it came to the man who would have perished but for its aid.

Avis with her own hands packed the basket just as Jack suspected, and her tears wet the little kerchief she dropped into it, while praying that heaven might guide it to safety.

This was done while the steamer lay to, some fifteen miles away from Jack.

Leaving Larry, the doctor makes his way to the state-room, eager to embrace his own. Reaching it he pauses to listen. Avis is an early riser. She has already been in the cabin, so the steward tells him.

A few seconds he listens to her moving about within, and unable to control longer his eager hand he knocks. There is a peculiar significance in his manner of doing this which Avis must recognize.

Hardly have his knuckles repeated the knock than he hears a slight scream within. Then a figure comes flying to the door with all the swiftness of love. The frame of wood that separates them is dashed open. A pair of gray eyes distended with thrilling hope, a white face marked by eager anticipation, followed by a pair of plump arms that fasten around his neck tightly—this is the welcome that greets the returned voyager.

"Oh, Jack!"

That is all she can say. Words do not count for much at a time like this, but her heart is attuned with happiness and thanksgiving for the wonderful blessing heaven has seen fit to bestow upon her.

Doctor Jack notes that several curious people gather in the cabin. He is pleased with their hearty congratulations, but desires to avoid their gaze at present, for he draws his now weeping wife—her tears are for joy—into the state-room where, with his strong tender arms around her, they can talk in peace.

Much is said. Jack learns all that has passed since his mishap. He is more than positive that the English athlete Hayne whose hands took hold of his ankles, and with such an easy toss sent him overboard, whoever may have struck the stunning blow he received.

It is thought best, however, not to mention the fact promiscuously, as he cannot prove the accusation, and it will do Hayne good.

Later on they go out on deck. To every one Doctor Jack tells the same story, that he was struck on the back and thrown overboard by some unknown party. This agrees with the story the Englishman has told when he sought the captain of the steamer one hour after Doctor Jack's mishap.

Much speculation is indulged in, but no one guesses the truth.

Only for the accident to the Panama's screw, which necessitated a delay of several days at the Peruvian port, Jack might not have overtaken his wife for weeks. There is a sad lack of telegraphic facilities in these South and Central American countries that causes travelers infinite trouble.

The northern voyage continues, and as the days pass on they draw nearer to the California coast. Doctor Jack, warned by the attempt on his life, becomes more cautious. He only ventures on deck at night in company. There are a number of men on board who seek his downfall, and it pays him to be careful.

He has heard an interesting story from Avis, which proclaims the fact that there are those near who have sought to secure the package Kirke Smith brought in, and which Jack seems to value so highly.

On the very next evening after his disappearance, while Avis, almost distracted by the various emotions that naturally took possession of her, was on deck talking with Larry, some one entered her state-room and tumbled things about in a search.

Fortunately she had given the package to Kirke Smith to take care of, so the search was in vain. On another occasion Larry caught a Chilian trying the door of his room. The man upon being questioned declared he was sitting reading in the cabin when he heard a distinct cry for help coming from that state-room, as he thought. Believing some one might be in trouble had endeavored to open the door. Of course, Larry knew this was a story fabricated up for the occasion, but the fellow told it with such a plausible air he forgave him, though marking the man for future observation.

Doctor Jack now begins to count the days and figure on the time which must elapse before he reaches New York. Indeed, as his plans mature, he even loses some of his old coolness, and shows a little feverish anxiety that astonishes those who have been accustomed to seeing him so calm even under extraordinary occasions.

He and Kirke have many consultations —always in the latter's state-room. These take turns remaining below, and are never on deck at the same time. They have something to guard there, something that represents Doctor Jack's fortune and which grows more valuable to him with each passing hour.

Thus he endeavors to find out what day they are apt to land at San Francisco, how long it will take the next trip across the country to New York, and various other points that indicate his movements, while writing on Manhattan Island at an early date.

He even wanders down to the engine-rooms and converses with the chief officer in charge, makes calculations about time, and while not bribing him, receives assurances that the steamer will do her best from that hour on.

Perhaps Doctor Jack fears a large bet on the result. Such things often occur on board trans-atlantic steamers, for the passengers are a heterogeneous crowd, and many among them cannot exist without some sort of excitement.

Larry amuses himself as best he can. There are a goodly number of persons, but they consist, for the most part, of refugees.

Perhaps the fact that such a constant surveillance is kept up prevents their enemies from making further attempts upon the strange package. A steamship is limited in its quarters, and discipline is rigid on board, so there is little danger that men with evil intentions hesitate about carrying out their designs. Escape is next to impossible. No express train can be boarded which will carry them beyond danger—around them the wide ocean—on board a captain who is at once judge and jury, king for the time being over the little realm he rules.

So these restless spirits keep quiet. They, too, make plans and organize a great conspiracy against the man whom the sea gave up. Whenever occasion offers they spy upon him as he saunters the deck with Larry or his wife, greedily picking up a few words here and a few there that may serve as straws to show which way the wind blows. Doctor Jack has a mighty torrent to cross before he finishes his journey and reaches New York in safety with the packet Kirke Smith brought in.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Land in sight!"

This glad cry is passed around the steamer one morning about ten o'clock, and as usual produces some excitement. Glasses are brought into use, and all sorts of guesses made, both concerning the nature of the land so dimly seen on their starboard bow, almost ahead, and the time that must elapse ere they reach their destination.

Doctor Jack, wise man that he is, goes directly to headquarters and is speedily in possession of all the facts known to his friend, the captain. They will, barring accidents, and tides being favorable, drop anchor off the city of San Francisco some time that evening.

During the afternoon all the travelers get their belongings in shape for a move. After the long voyage every one appears happy at the prospect of stepping on terra firma again.

Doctor Jack's brow is clouded at times, for the steamer was thrown from her course by a storm safely weathered three days back, and considerable time was lost in regaining it, so that when he figures on reaching New York in person by noon on the fourth day of November, he has a Herculean task before him. What is unfortunate he can find out nothing of the train times from the land, and this, in a measure, accounts for his eagerness to land, in order to make investigations.

The day wears away, and gradually the land opens up, so, that without a glass they can see its beauties. San Francisco lies there like a gem set in a ring, her stately buildings flashing in the light of the setting sun that gilds their many windows until the scene looks like one of enchantment.

Then dusk creeps on, and the good vessel makes a spurt as though anxious to reach the goal ahead, where a thousand electric lights mark the site of the wealthy city.

Doctor Jack and his wife are on deck, ready to go ashore just as soon as possible, when the health officer permits. Jack chafes at the thought of this delay, and growls at the regulations which the health and custom officials make use of to build a hedge around all incoming travelers.

Doctor Jack has under his coat, and fastened securely to his body the flat package which Kirke Smith delivered to him in Valparaiso, but it is far from his intention to smuggle jewelry or other valuables into the states, yet that which he carries is worth a fortune—to him.

Nearer still the steamer advances, slowly creeping past the reefs, under the guidance of the pilot who knows every foot of water in these parts. The lights no longer dazzle them, as a whole, but each individual one stands out on its own merits.

To the impatient souls on board it seems as though their progress is snail-like, but at last the anchor goes down. They are immediately boarded by several officials, and for this Doctor Jack is at least thankful.

A few formalities are gone through with, when a dozen passengers descend to the tug, which will take them with their effects ashore.

Jack glances at his watch, and notes the time with an uneasy feeling, as though he apprehends trouble.

Great traveler that he is he has not been in San Francisco before, and must depend upon others for a knowledge of facts. Here, then a man pushes forward and offers the use of his hack. Jack points to a couple of leather portmanteaus, their only baggage, and opens the door for Avis to enter.

In two minutes all is ready. The driver comes to the door for his orders, which Jack gives, he is positive, in plain language.

Just as the fellow turns away, he finds his arm grasped and hears a low, fierce voice:

"Would you like to earn fifty dollars, man?"

Well, for half that sum a San Francisco hackman would peril his soul, to say nothing about his body, and John replies instantly:—

"You bet!"

He sees at his side, endeavoring to keep in the shadow, so that those in the vehicle may not discover him, a tall, distinguished gentleman, undoubtedly an Englishman.

This worthy immediately puts some bills in his hand, bills that amount to the sum specified.

"What am I to do?" demands the driver, probably in doubt as to whether he must run away with his load, or dump them into the bay as they may be robbed. Which job he hardly likes, as the appearance of Doctor Jack and the Texan indicate men of resolution, bold fighters, and parties not to be betrayed with impunity.

"Take them to the wrong station. They want to go east. Manage it so they take the train, and the money is yours. Can you do it, man?"

John gives a gurgling laugh, and says:—

"You bet! Dead sure!"

"I'll be on hand to see how you come out," with which the Englishman dodges into the crowd just as Larry pokes his head out of the back window, squeaking in his high voice:—

"Say, fellah, why don't you make haste! By Jove! now, it would be too bad you know, if we missed our twain—by Jove!"

"Missed it," rears Jack, aroused, "well, there'll be the devil to pay."

Whereupon they start, and the driver feels a little uneasy over his position. True, he has the fifty dollars stowed away in his pocket, and that would be balm for many a hauling over the coals, but somehow he fears that these tourists are inclined to be desperate people.

They have come in on a British vessel, but he recognizes fellow-Americans. The Texan gives him an uneasy feeling, while Doctor Jack awes him.

It happens, however, that Jehu is a reckless sort of man, and he believes he can earn his money and escape before they discover the mistake. At any rate, it can be called an error on his part.

They move along.

No one can complain of the slow rate of speed, for Jehu drives his horses like a man who intends reaching his goal. Our friends feel that they will get there in time, and all seem easy in their minds—all save Larry.

That worthy appears to have a spirit of unrest. He bobs his head out of the window a dozen times, scans the lamp posts as they pass, and in various ways manifests something more than curiosity.

At length they pull up, the driver drops the two ladies portmanteaus from above and is presently at the door. His game is to receive his pay, mount his box and drive off before the victims discover how he has left them stranded at the wrong station.

This is a very nice idea, but Doctor Jack immediately knocks it on the head.

"Remain in the vehicle, friends, while I run and see about the train. If we are left we may have to go to the Palace Hotel."

The driver grits his teeth at having his plans foiled, but dares say nothing. He would give a good deal to be able to crawl out of sight just then, dreading Jack's return.

Doctor Jack is gone just three minutes, and then he appears in view, rushing toward them with furious strides, his face dark, his manner alarming, at least to the eyes of the guilty John, who trembles in his boots.

Straight up to him Jack runs and demands, in a low but terrible voice, what he means by taking them to the wrong depot.

The fellow plays his part fairly well, but it takes the quick eye of Doctor Jack to read between the lines.

"You are telling me what is false. I demand the truth. Were you hired to bring us here? Admit it, and I will not harm you. Persist in your denial, and you must take the consequences."

Something about his manner assures the driver that this is not one course for him to pursue. Doctor Jack has a way about him of convincing men with whom he has dealings that it will be to their interest to deal by his will.

So the fellow falters out a half-way confession, endeavoring to screen himself, as well as he can, at the expense of truth.

Jack brings him to a halt in the midst of his effort. He has no time to spare.

"Take hold here—up with it—now the other. Off for the Union Pacific station, man."

He makes no threats, but his voice and manner are both terrible, and the driver fears he has gotten himself into a serious mess. An idea strikes him that may save his neck.

He lashes away vigorously, he sends his team and vehicle across the city to the main station about as speedily as a hack has ever been known to travel in San Francisco. Hills are surmounted on the jump. John seems determined to remedy his mistake, if such it could be called. Secretly, he knows full well, the dirty rascal, that it is already too late.

The manner in which they are dragged through the streets of the Golden City prevents any conversation inside the coach.

At any moment the vehicle is apt to give a lurch that may send them forward. Jack has thrown that strong left arm of his around Avis, while he braces himself to meet any crisis. Unless there comes an upset, all will be well.

This rocking, dragging, reckless movement is kept up for some little time, when suddenly the vehicle draws up near the curb. Jack looks out, and sees by the many lights that they have arrived at their destination.

He feels for the handle of the door, but after finding it is baffled a little, still the driver does not put in an appearance to help him. At last Jack succeeds, and leaps out.

The secret of the driver's failure to come to his assistance is explained. He is not on the box, nor can he be seen. Evidently the man's fears have gotten the better of his valor. As soon as he brought his vehicle to a stop, he dropped down and deserted it.

This does not bother Jack. He is more vitally concerned regarding a train just now.

So he whips the two small leather trunks from the boot of the vehicle with as much ease as though they were handbags.

By this time Larry is on the pavement with Kirke beside him, and Avis appears.

As Doctor Jack gives the order to a Texan, Larry makes for the other, but finds the Texan ahead.

"Look out for Doctor Jack's wife. I'll take care of this," says Kirke, quietly.

Leaving the deserted hack they bustle into the station, smiling at the odd appearance which they undoubtedly present, but business allows little regard for looks, and Doctor Jack snaps his fingers at such things as this.

Straight to where they see some official in the uniform of the railroad company they proceed, and there Jack drops his burden.

"Are we too late for the eastern train?" he asks.

"Unfortunately, yes. It left fifteen minutes ago," is the discouraging reply, but Doctor Jack has prepared himself for this emergency.

"It is of the utmost importance that I should overtake that train, sir."

"It is our fast express, sir, a flyer."

"Never mind. I will engage a special."

"An expensive business, my dear sir."

"Hang expense, man. Direct me as to what I shall do."

CHAPTER XXV.

The official takes another look at Doctor Jack and makes up his mind this man is fully able to stand the racket. Besides, he discovers something familiar about the other.

"I have met you before, my dear sir."

"Very likely. I have traveled much."

The official is eyeing him steadily.

"Were you in Spain two years ago?"

"Yes."

"Ah! I am proud to meet you, Doctor Jack. I won a wager on your success at that bull fight," holding out his hand.

"So did I," remarks the doctor, with a glance in the direction of his wife.

"And any favor I can do, Doctor Jack, I will be only too glad of the opportunity."

"Then see about the special as quickly as you can, sir. I have a tremendous amount of interest in overtaking that train."

"You will be on board, Doctor Jack, long before it crosses the Rockies. I give you my word, but it may cost you half a thousand dollars."

"A mere bagatelle, sir. If I fail to reach New York by noon on the fourth of November I will probably cost me a million dollars."

The official purses up his lips as if to whistle, but omits no sound.

"A pretty close shave even if you are on time. If it were any one else than Doctor Jack I'd say it couldn't be done."

"I mean to be by noon on the fourth of November if they have managed to succeed in the past. This special, sir—"

"I have telegraphed already for the man you must see, and here he comes. An hour won't make much difference. You will have only an engine and sleeper. The director will make out your schedule and give it to the conductor. Thus you will know just at what point you can overtake the eastern flyer."

This is very nice talk, indeed, Jack, who begins to see the wrinkles being smoothed out of the rough road in front. He is now deeply engaged in conversation with the official when Larry pops up. Every one seems to take a decided interest in him when they hear who he is. Sometimes he is very famous.

The arrangements are speedily made, and our little party feel their spirits rise as they contemplate a solution of the problem that has so recently overshadowed them.

What does an hour count, when with a special they can rush over the rails like lightning. It is astonishing what money can be made to do in this world —as any rate, it lubricates the wheels and makes them run famously.

Doctor Jack consults his watch as they arise from the lunch which has engaged their attention in the restaurant, more to pass the time away than because they were hungry.

"The hour is up," he remarks.

"Your train is ready, Doctor Jack," says the official to whom he has been turned over.

"Good!"

The small amount of luggage is put aboard, and presently they enter the Pullman sleeper which is to be their quarters until the regular train is overhauled.

It is not an unusual thing for a special to be sent flying over the rails, and, according to the rules of the road, everything gives way to such a wizard traveler.

The start is made.

Once they clear the yards their speed increases, and presently they rattle along in a way that causes Kirke Smith some anxiety, for the Texan, quite at home on the wildest horse one could find, is not much of a railroad traveler, and holds his breath when he finds himself being whirled over some level stretch, or down a slight declivity at the speed of a mile a minute.

And this is only a beginning.

When the locomotive gets warmed to the work, more astonishing figures will be shown.

As for Larry, this pleases him immensely. He lolls in a chair in the smoking compartment, and uses up numerous packages of cigarettes—a luxury he has been deprived of for some time, owing to the haste of their departure from Valparaiso. The others now understand the meaning of Larry's wonderful snake so child-like and bland, when he came in with bulging pockets, while they were at lunch. He had simply cut the entire cigarette stock of the dealer in the station, resolved not to be left in the grand hustle across the Continent.

Jack has secured pillows from the porter of the car, and has a lower berth made up for Avis, who, feeling tired, will lie down for a time.

As for himself, he enters into conversation with the conductor, a bright, agreeable fellow, and picks up a number of facts connected with the route across the plains, some of which may prove valuable to him.

I wonder if, with this open window, I could indulge in a cigar. Join me?" he says.

"With pleasure, sir. You can do what you please, since you own the car for the time being. Of course, we have a smoking compartment—"

"Larry monopolizes that," laughs Jack, lighting a cigar.

"What! that little man?"

"With a fearful weed."

"Ah! I comprehend. You do not take to the cigarette, then?"

"I abominate them; but Larry is privileged. He's a great fellow. Let me tell you some of the things I've known him to do."

These are numerous enough to cause the conductor to feel the utmost interest in the peculiar little dude, though finding it hard to understand how a hero can appear such an oddity.

Their speed is terrific.

At times they seem to actually shoot through space, such is the manner in which a fearless engineer can whirl a special on its way. Doctor Jack is deeply interested in the progress made, and makes a copy of the schedule which the conductor carries, of course subject to changes. A red light at a station may bring them to a halt, when a message brought aboard will govern their future movements.

They slow up in passing a station, the conductor looks out, guesses the identity of the place, consults his paper and announces that they are "on time."

So the night goes on.

What Jack fears most of all is some accident that may delay them. He knows the men with whom he deals, and would put no devilry past them. If they learn in some way, as is certainly possible, that a special follows them, they will readily draw conclusions and understand who pays the bill.

Jack believes a man would be dropped at some stations with instructions to blow up the track, or in any way delay the special for some hours, even if compelled to ditch it.

This he earnestly trusts will not take place. A train going seventy miles an hour can be thrown from the rails under ordinary circumstances, without the attention of train wreckers.

These thoughts would keep Jack from sleeping, even did he care to. He remains awake and speculates as to what he can do in case certain possibilities become realities.

At just five minutes of one, as he is replacing his watch, a sudden shrill whistle sounds, and it is easy to feel the action of the air brakes. The train comes to a stand. They are just about a quarter of a mile from a village, where, as the conductor informed him, regular trains were accustomed to draw up, and receive telegraphic messages while the engine was renewed with water.

Jack puts his head out of the window. He first thing he sees is a red lantern on the track just ahead of the locomotive.

Here is aggravation, vexation, delay.

He swings himself off the car, with Larry at his heels, to see what it means. Avis has appeared, and looks from a window, anxious because she enters into Jack's plans with all her heart as a loving and faithful wife should.

When Doctor Jack reaches the spot where the red lantern is he finds there the engineer and conductor of his "special."

"What's wrong?"

The conductor is swearing, while the engineer keeps looking around as though he fully expects to see a band of daring road-agents appear in view.

A rail has been removed—it lays near by across the track. Only for the red light these on the special would have been wrecked in a terrible manner.

"Very considerate of the rascals," says the conductor, puzzled and angry.

"I can account for it. All they wanted was to delay us," and Jack tells his ideas.

By Jove! what is to hinder us replacing the rail. Then it's only a little time wasted" and Larry leaps away at the long steel rail in a manner that, if quite ineffectual, shows his desire to accomplish something.

His words electrify them. The porter, fireman, and Kirke Smith are called, and in a few minutes the rail is in position.

Every spike has been thrown away, but there is a claw for drawing more on the engine and a hammer for driving them home.

Lanterns are not needed, since the brilliant headlights of the engine gives forth the illumination they could wish, for. One picks up a spike here and there. The engineer sends them home with heavy blows.

"All ready!" is announced.

Thirteen minutes lost!

What would have perhaps paralyzed traffic for a time on many an European railroad, had been only an incident of thirteen minutes duration on this American trans-continental line.

The train once more to board the special, and "forward" is the cry. Avis has a story to tell now, and when Doctor Jack hears it, he experiences mingled emotions, anger for his bitter enemies, and admiration toward his brave wife. It also makes clear the design of the parties who removed the rail.

While the men were all at work in front of the locomotive, Avis, looking out of the window, heard a noise toward the rear of the train, and glancing in that direction, was just in time to see a man's legs passing in at one of the windows which Larry had left open.

UNION

We have this week to chronicle a very sad death in the person of little Benny B. Perry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry. His demise took place on Tuesday, 15th inst., at the early age of 4 years, 8 months and 15 days. He was only sick about four days with that dread disease, inflammation. The funeral took place on Wednesday and was largely attended to Morven cemetery. The Rev. Pope delivered a very appropriate sermon. His end was peace.

There has been an interesting time here of late between several ladies. We hope the trouble is settled.

Only a Pansy Blossom, only a faded flower, is the latest song and the pansy is the pansies for the fall of 1897.

Bicycles are very numerous here at present. One of our young ladies is about to purchase a new one.

One of our young girls was heard making this remark when the new steam whistle came around on the G. T. R. Why, she says, what a peculiar sound; why it's only a steamboat looking for water.

A serious accident has befallen the oil well. Some party or parties put a bar of iron or steel in the well and the men are working like heroes to get it out. It is to be hoped they will succeed. We hope they will be successful. They have put several charges of dynamite in the well but without any success.

Horseback riding is becoming popular at present with our girls. A professor will be engaged, also a new supply of horses and bareback feats will then be performed.

A NOBLE FAMILY

Popular and well known in Canada.

For many, many years a very noble family, popular and well known, have conferred great blessings on Canadian homes.

This family to which we refer has served thehomes of Canadians faithfully and well; they have brightened the pathway of many a sad woman when the clouds were dark; they have cheered hearts when there were grim and stony scarce; they have been a blessing to thousands of husbands and children, helping them to dress better, so that mothers, fathers and children were enabled to face the world as handsomely dressed as their wealthier friends and neighbors.

These popular, tried and helpful friends are the Diamond Dyes, the same in power, work and usefulness to-day as they were twenty years ago.

There are many imitations of these celebrated Diamond Dyes worthless and dangerous to health and purse. These deceptive dyes, as they can never do good work.

When you purchase dyes see that the name "Diamond" is on every envelope. With the Diamond Dyes success is always sure and certain.

One very pretty fashion is the use of checked, dotted and embroidered black nets made up over colored and fancy silks for dressy, high necked costumes.

PATRIOTIC SERVICES.

Special Subjects Touched upon in our Churches on Sunday Last.

The services in the various churches in town on Sunday last were marked by evidences of loyalty and patriotism In most instances the sermon dealt to a great extent with the reign of Queen Victoria, and touched upon the influence which she had exerted upon the spread of christian religion throughout her vast domains. In the Sunday schools, also, similar lessons, in simpler forms, were drawn, and the pupils were enjoined to preserve intact their spirit of loyalty and devotion to their Queen and country.

Church of St. Mary Magdalene

By invitation of the Rector and churchwardens a representative gathering of the loyal citizens of Napanee assembled at the hawker's store on Sunday afternoon and went in procession headed by the newly organized band to the church. The Mayor, the local member of Parliament, the County judge, the sheriff, officers of the court, representatives from the various benevolent societies, the firemen, etc., beside the visiting lodges of the C.O.O.F. from Trenton, Belleville and Shannonville took part in the proceedings. The arrangements for marshalling the procession were in the hands of the Mayor, who was ably assisted by Capt. Smith. There were not less than 150 of our prominent citizens in the ranks of the procession.

The clergy and churchwardens received the contingent at the west door of the church when all proceeded up the centre aisle to the places assigned them.

A Te Deum service had been arranged for the occasion, copies of which were distributed amongst those present. The service was choral throughout, the Te Deum selected being Dyke's in F. Barnby's Anthem, "Like the sound of Many Waters," with words specially composed for the occasion, concluding with the National Anthem. Two special stanzas suitable for the Jubilee year being added, was another distinctive feature of the service. The solos were taken by Mrs. Herrington and Miss Daly. During the offertory solos were sung by Miss Daly, late soloist of Christ church cathedral, Montreal, and a prophet not without honor in her native place; and Mr. Tilley, who was never heard to better advantage. The latter selected a National Anthem, "God bless the Queen of Canada", composed for the Jubilee year by Mr. C. D. Bingham, of Toronto, with whom Mr. Tilley is associated professionally.

Rev. Mr. Jarvis preached a most appropriate sermon. His remarks were a kaleidoscopic view of the principal events in the life and reign of Her Majesty, and breathed a spirit of true love and loyalty, and were listened to with deepest attention by everyone in the crowded church.

The children of the Sunday School occupied all the west end of the church and took part in the services. Each was presented with a Jubilee medal, furnished by the Messrs. Spinks, of London, medalists to the Queen. This souvenir was submitted to the Queen for her approval, and will in a few years become very valuable as only a limited number was struck off.

The decorations of the church attracted a good deal of attention. Though not elaborate they were in good taste, reflecting great credit upon Mrs. Peaudl, the wife of the rector's warden, who was in charge of this department. Of course the national colors and union jack were much in evidence, but the rood screen with its beautiful tracery worked out in ferns and wild flowers was perhaps the most attractive feature. A floral lily bell arranged by Mrs. O. L. Herring and Mrs. Leonard, hung in front of this screen. On the pillars of the decoration were a floral cross arranged by Mrs. Baines and Mrs. Wray and a daisy crown, draped with flags prepared by Mrs. Tobey, of North Napanee. Mrs. Wilkins, president of the Horticultural society, was indefatigable in her labors, loaning spent the greater part of the week in gathering material and superintending the disposal of it. Her good taste was much appreciated.

The experiment of introducing a piano (a magnificent instrument furnished by Mr. F. W. Hart) to reinforce the very inadequate organ, was very successful. The effect under the skilful exaggeration of the organist Mrs. Harris and Mr. Hawley, who did duty as pianist, was almost equal to an orchestra. Indeed many of those present were under the impression that orchestra was concealed in the organ chamber.

Besides the immense congregation of at least two people which thronged the church even to the vestry and porch-e, there must have been almost as many outside, who remained throughout the entire service, a great portion of which was distinctly audible to those in the grounds and adjacent streets.

The example of St. Mary Magdalene church was followed in many of the other churches of the diocese, the same service being adopted in them. Over 3000 copies of the service were furnished from Napanee and locally adapted for use by each congregation.

At evensong a large portion of the programme of the afternoon was repeated and in addition thereto, the Rev. Mr. Wakefield's beautiful Jubilee hymn, approved by the queen herself, was sung.

Eastern Methodist Church.

On Sunday last at the Eastern Methodist church, the Jubilee anniversary was observed in the form of Flower Sunday. The church was most artistically decorated. Festoons of bunting in red, white and blue hung from the centre chandelier to the side walls. The organ was draped with the same material, and over this was hung a picture of Queen Victoria. On the east wall was draped a flag, a large Union Jack. Around the gallery were suspended small flags. In the way of flowers, buttercups and daisies were used in profusion. Strings were made of these and twined around the gallery pillars, the pulpit and the rail in front of the choir. Very large bouquets of the same were placed upon the pulpit and on the tables inside the altar rail, together with some very handsome house plants. On easels within the altar were large pictures of Queen Victoria and the Prince of Wales. One noticeable feature in the decoration was a crown made of daisies and the letters V. R. placed on the gallery, just in rear of the pulpit. A half dozen canaries were added to the decoration, and their bright chirup and shrill notes added to the surrounding beauty.

In the morning the church choir was augmented by the entire Sunday School who had been drilled by Mr. W. A. Rockwell. Just here allow us to state that the singing was well done, and the greatest credit is due the conductor for the excellent manner in which they were drilled. The singing was well executed, everyone keeping in perfect time. The service was opened by chanting the Lord's Prayer, followed by the hymn "All hail the power of Jesus name." After prayer the chorus choir rendered the anthem "Adestres Fideles." Upon conclusion of the scripture lesson, the hymn "Am I a soldier of the cross" was sung. Owing to the illness of the pastor, an address to the children was delivered by Rev. G. B. White. The rev. gentleman was equal to the occasion, and his remarks were listened to with interest. During the taking of the offertory the chorus rendered "Praise ye the Father", followed by the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers," and the service closed with the benediction.

In the evening the regular service was held. The pulpit on this occasion was occupied by Rev. A. Young, a former pastor of the Presbyterian church. The service in the Western church was withdrawn and many of the congregation attended the service in the sister church. Many were glad of the opportunity to hear the reverend gentleman. He delivered an able and instructive sermon. During the taking of the offertory, a solo was rendered by Mr. J. Fred Tilley. His selection was "O Pro Peccatis" from Rossini's Stabat Mater. He has never before been heard in this style of music, but so exceedingly well was the selection rendered that it was highly appreciated by the entire congregation.

St. Patrick's Church.

Special prayers were offered before mass. In his sermon Rev. Father Hogan, speaking of the day, referred in eloquent terms to the freedom enjoyed by the Catholic church everywhere throughout the Empire during the reign of Queen Victoria. No place had experienced more fully than our beloved Canada freedom from enactments of any kind contrary to the carrying out of the teachings of the church. In arts and sciences the progress was noted that has been made during the last sixty years. During the Victorian era the church had chronicled many memorable events. The progress of the church in Canada was most gratifying to her children, while the harmony which bound together young and old of every shade of opinion in the celebration of the diamond jubilee, was a presage of most happy days for our young Dominion. The service terminated with the benediction and singing of the national anthem.

St. John's. Selby.

At Selby, St. John's church, in common with the majority of the congregations of the Anglican communion in this part of the Province, a special jubilee service was arranged for Sunday, June 20th, at which, representatives of the Municipal council and other township officers made a corporate act of worship in commemoration of the grand reign of Victoria the Good. A large number of the Loyal Orangemen of the district assembled at the town hall and came in procession to the church in proper regalia.

The church was beautifully decorated. The chancel screen with red, white and blue bunting, flags, etc., and a beautiful motto of white roses, "God save the Queen." The chancel was banked with ferns, flowers, etc., and lovely bouquets were arranged around the windows presenting a quiet, harmonious scene that will long dwell in the memories of those present. The rector, Rev. W. G. Swayne, is to be congratulated on the success of his effort to fully celebrate the auspicious occasion. A special service authorized by the Archbishop of Canterbury was used on this occasion, copies of which were printed and distributed to the congregation, who showed their appreciation of this attention by accepting the pamphlet and keeping it as a souvenir of the service.

The musical part of the service was bright and joyous, and was particularly well rendered.

Altogether the service was one of the most impressive and solemn that has been rendered in Selby, for many a long day, and afforded our people, of all creeds and classes, an opportunity of expressing their loyalty alike to the altar and the throne.

Adolphustown and Fredericksburgh.

At the ordinal invitation of the rector and churchwardens, the Fredericksburgh Municipal Council together with the A.O.U.W., and Sillsville Orange Lodge paraded to St. Paul's Anglican church, Sandhurst, at 11 o'clock, while at 3 o'clock the Adolphustown Council, the A.O.U.W. and Foresters fraternal societies paraded to St. Alban's church, to attend the Jubilee Thanksgiving service. There was an immense congregation at both churches. The service was hearty and not too long. The singing was excellent, and the sermon was to the point, from Peter's words, 'Love the brotherhood; fear God; honor the king." Miss Phippen, of Kingston, sang an anthem with beautiful effect, while the collection was being made. All present appeared highly to appreciate the opportunity afforded them by these special services to show their loyalty to Her Gracious Majesty, and to give God thanks for the blessings of her reign.

BATH

The 221 June passed off very quietly in Bath. A great many of the people went to D seronto and some to Kingston and of course our small town was pretty well drained of its population.

The Rev. Dr. Tucker, Mrs. Tucker and family embarked on the str. Alexandra last Monday for Montreal, and from there he will drive to Sutton, his next circuit. Dr. Tucker is, without exception, one of the best pastors Bath has ever had, and we hope ere long his name will be placed where it should be, near the head of No. 1 men. A great many friends of the pastor and his wife gathered at the wharf to say goodbye and bid them all well, and many were the hand-shakes from outsiders as well as church members, each shake of the hand proving to him the high esteem in which he was held by them. Last Sunday evening was one of his best productions. They say it was indeed good, and surely it was worth while to appreciate the opportunity afforded them by these special services to show their loyalty to Her Gracious Majesty, and to give God thanks for the blessings of her reign.

OBITUARY.

MRS. EZRA HAMBLY

After two years of wedded happiness, Mary Gertrude Ross, beloved wife of Mr. S. E. Hambly, of Macfonald, was called home on Thursday, June 17th, 1897, at the early age of 30 years, 4 months and 11 days. Up to the Sabbath previous to her death deceased was in perfect health. On Sabbath evening she had a stroke of paralysis, from which she never recovered. By her loving disposition, her earnest Christian life, her willingness to oblige her neighbors and assist anyone needing her help, Mrs. Hambly formed a host of friends who will sorely miss her whom all loved. Deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr. Abram Ross, of Corbyville, who with Mrs. Ross, and the many relatives of deceased have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community. The Foresters, of which body Mr. Hambly is a member, turned out in a body to the funeral on Sunday 20th, which was the largest ever held in Bethany church. Rev. Mr. Snowdon preached an earnest practical sermon, during the course of which he made feeling reference to the blameless life of the deceased. Straws Show Which Way the Wind Blows.

HERE IS ONE OF THE STRAWS YOU'VE READ ABOUT.

—BRICKS
—WITHOUT —STRAW.

Some men are like the unfortunate slaves of old, who were forced to make bricks without straw; they go round working in hot weather with HEAVY CLOTHING and HEAVY HATS, for which they pay big prices, when they could have saved the wear and tear on those more expensive articles of men's wear by buying CHEAP, LIGHT SUMMER SUITS, UNDERCLOTHING and LIGHT STRAW HATS, besides saving money by buying those cheaper goods, which would enable them to buy bricks to build a home with. See the point?

—The citizens of Deseronto celebrated Jubilee Day right royally, and were assisted by great crowds of visitors from the surrounding district. The procession of 500 school children, the march past and a tug of war between Deseronto and Picton, were the leading features of the day. The latter event was by many pronounced a brutal affair, the contesting teams straining every nerve for nearly two hours and a half without either winning the victory. The visitors succeeded in pulling the handkerchief about eight inches over the line, but not far enough to meet the requirements of the rules. Some of the contestants pulled until they were black in the face and blood streamed from the shoulders of others where the rope passed around their bodies.

SPORTING.

CYCLING.

F. O. Meyers, Kingston, broke the record between Kingston and Belleville this week. The official time of his trip was seven hours and fifty-three minutes, or without counting stoppages, five hours and thirty minutes. The best Canadian record for this distance is seven hours and twenty minutes.

BASEBALL.

FOOTBALL.

Napanee and Toronto clubs will play at the park on 1st July. A keenly contested game is looked for.

The association football game between Kingston and Napanee, was played at Kingston on Tuesday last, and although not particularly exciting at any time, was characterized by good, clean gentlemanly play. The teams were composed as follows: Napanee—Messrs. Vanalstine, Rockwell, Preston, Grieves, Smyth, Exley, Lumley, E Grange, Chown, Wagar and W. A. Grange. Kingston—Elliott, Hamilton, Robinson, Shaw, Gaines, Slater, M. Murray, McCaig, D. Murray. Referee—W. H. Fletcher. In the first half, with wind and sun against them, the home team managed to score one goal to their opponents' nil. The play, however, was not so one-sided as this would seem to indicate, as plenty of good chances to score were lost by Kingston forwards. After half time Kingston added another goal; then Napanee scored on a rush, but just before time was called Kingston raised it another notch making the final score 3 to 1 in their favor. Napanee was handicapped by the absence of two or three of its best players, but like true sports they went in to win.

CRICKET.

Napanee played Picton on Thursday. The game was decided on the first innings, though Napanee got a start of 75 in the second, when the game had to be ended. In the double figures "Grandpa" Maybee headed the list, having 34 to his credit. Messrs. C. Maybee and J. Daly also did great work, having 21 and 23 respectively to their credit at the end of the first innings. The score stood 112 to 61 in Napanee's favor. Messrs. C. VICTORIA'S JUBILEE.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES UPON A TIMELY THEME.

He Pays a Glowing Tribute to Great Britain's Venerable Ruler—The Capacity of Women—The Splendors of Earth and of Heaven.

Beatrice, Neb., June 20.—This is Dr. Talmage's third annual visit to the Chautauqua here, one of the greatest throngs ever assembled on the ground. He lectured yesterday; he preaches today. Text, Esther v, 3, "What wilt thou, Queen Esther?"

This question, which was asked of a queen thousands of years ago, all civilized nations are this day asking of Queen Victoria. "What wilt thou have of honor, of reward or reverence or service of national and international acclamation? What will you, queen of the nineteenth century?" The seven miles of procession through the streets of London day after to-morrow will be a small part of the congratulatory procession whose multitudinous tramp will encircle the earth. The celebrative anthems that will sound up from Westminster abbey and St. Paul's cathedral in London will be less than the vibration of one harp string as compared with the doxologies which this hour roll up from all nations in praise to God for the beautiful life and the glorious reign of this oldest queen and noblest. From 5 o'clock of the morning of 1837, when the archbishop of Canterbury addressed the embarrassed and weeping and almost affrighted girl of 18 years, with the startling words, "your majesty," until this sixtieth anniversary of her enthronement, the prayer of all good people on all side of the seas, whether that prayer be offered by the 300,000,000 of her subjects or the larger number of millions who are not her subjects, whether that prayer be chanted in church, or rolled from great orchestras or poured forth by military bands from platform and parade ground, or those of triumphant armies all around the world, has been and is now, "God save the queen!" Amid the innumerable columns that have been printed in the sea, what column

Rheumatism & Dyspepsia CURED.
571 St. Patrick Street, Ottawa, July 31st, 1896.
To the Pheenoline Medicine Co., Ltd., Ottawa, Ont.
Gentlemen,—On the advice of a friend I tried one bottle of your famous rheumatic remedy, Pheenoline, and to my surprise it cured me of rheumatism, from which I have suffered for many years.
It also cured me of dyspepsia, from which I was suffering at the time, so that I feel now like a new man.
I have tried several remedies for rheumatism, some of which did me a certain amount of good, but nothing that I have taken has done so much for me as your Pheenoline, and I have much pleasure in recommending it to other sufferers.
Yours very truly,

OBITUARY.

WINNIE WHELAN.

On Thursday 27th May, the beloved daughter of Thomas Whelan, Newburgh, passed peacefully away at the ripe age of 16. Winnie will be missed in our midst, for she was a noble girl. From her appearance anyone could judge something of the difficulties and storms through which she had passed, and yet she came through defiant and triumphant. As she battled with weakness and death and as they looked at her poor, thin, wasted body, yet so full of triumph and victory, they felt, "O Death, where is thy sting? O Grave where is thy victory? She was just outside the narrow waiting for Jesus to come and take her safely into the Haven of Rest. She bore the marks of the storms through which she had passed, but there she lay while Heaven's glory burst through the Valley of the Shadow of Death until at last her Lord came and took her to receive the crown of life which fadeth not away.

ART THOU LIVING YET.

(The following tribute to a sister's memory.)

Is there no grand, immortal sphere,
Bey ad the realm of broken ties,
To fill the waste that mock us here,
And dry the tears from weeping eyes.
Where winter smiles in endless spring,
And June stands near with deathless flower
Where we on e'er the dear one ring
Who loved us in this world of sorr.
I asked and lo! my cheeks are wet,
With tears for the I cannot see,
Oh Winnie, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

I feel thy kisses o'er me thrill
Thou unseen angel of my life,
I hear thy harp sound me thrill,
An undertone to care and strife.
Thy tender eyes upon me shine,
As on a being glorified
Till I am thine and thou art mine,
And I forget that thou hast died.
I almost lose each vain regret,
In visions of a life to be.
But Winnie art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

The springtime blooms the summer fades
The winter blew along my way.
But over every light and shade,
Thy memory lived by night and day.
It soothed to sleep my wildest pain.
Like some sweet song that cannot die
And like the murmur of the main,
Grows deeper when the storm is nigh.
I know the brightest stars that set,
Return to bless the yearning rea,
But Winnie, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

I sometimes think my soul come back,
From o'er the dark and silent stream,
Where last we watched thy shining track,
To those green hills of which we dream.
The loving arms around me twine,
My cheeks bloom younger in thy breath.
Till thou art mine and I am thine,
Without a thought of pain or death,
And yet at times my eyes are wet,
With tears for her I cannot see.
Oh Winnie, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

IN MEMORIAM.

A few lines written in memory of Mrs. James Coulter, who died at her home at Mountmorris, on Monday, June 7th, 1897.

The messenger of death has claimed
A mother and a wife,
Oh what a sudden call for one
Just in the bloom of life.

Husband, children, cease your weeping,
For the love of her that's gone,
Think not of your earthly parting,
But say to God, Thy will be done.

Who should our tears in sorrow flow
When God in mercy called her home,
And bids her leave a world of woe
For an immortal crown.

Is not her death a gain to her,
Whose life to God was given,
Gladly to earth she closed her eyes
To open them in Heaven.

Yes, Mary Ann has crossed the river,
She's landed on the Golden shore,
There to praise her Lord forever
All her sorrows now are o'er.

Father will the kindly love him
While on earth he has to stay,
And bless those noble parents
In their afternoon of life.

Brothers and sisters, follow her,
While sweet bird voice has flown,
"In the stilled rock she now is resting"
And will meet us at the Throne.

To the memory of Bennie, the 4 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry, who died May 24th, 1897.

It is so hard to love him,
To have him go away
To see no more the little form,
To hunger night and day
For just a touch of his warm hand,
A sound of laughter sweet
A song sung in a childish voice,
The patter of his feet.

The tears the scalding tears will fall,
He never more will come
To climb your knee and kiss your cheeks,
Bid father welcome home.
Some trace of him your eyes will note
At noon at night, at morn,
The scattered books, the treasured gifts,
The garments he had worn.

In sad young heart, its innocence
Of every wrong and guile.
Its fulness of forgiveness love
His like their happy smile.
God heard him, and He answer gave
Now let the mourning cease.
"Come little one, come home," He said,
"Into the Land of Peace."

You miss him, miss the tender tones
That made your heart rejoice.
But think to-day, and comfort take
God's choice has gained a voice.
You sheltered him upon your breast,
The child so quaint and wise;
To day, where sorrow is unknown,
He walks in Paradise.

Parents, bye and bye, you'll find again
The loved one you have lost.
His eyes have learned the mystery,
His feet the vale have crossed.
Your arms will surely clasp once more,
The little fair-haired boy,
Who waits for you beside the gates
Singing a song of joy.

Lewellin Maude Stratton Married.

One of the prettiest weddings ever beheld by the many who witnessed it took place in the Methodist church, Little Britain, on Wednesday, June 16th. The day broke with beautiful sunshine, as it did proba. had satisfied the wishes of all concerned. The church was gorgeously decorated by the young people, the whole inside altar being banked with the choicest of all summer flowers, of variegated hues and rare, exquisite beauty overspread the pulpit. An old resident remarked to "Never saw it so lovely before." The centre of attraction was Miss Lewella Maude Stratton, who was to be united in marriage to Mr. Edward J. Breckenridge, of the Mercantile Agency, Chicago. At the hour of 2 p m., as the organ pealed forth the sweet strains of the wedding march, led by the gentle touch of Miss Lottie Davidson, the groom, accompanied by his best man, Dr. White, of Lindsay, entered the church and took his place before the altar, followed by the bride, leaning on her father's arm. She was attired in her bridal robe of silk, with chiffon and pearl trimmings, the full veil looped with roses, and carried a magnificent bouquet of bridal roses. She was pronounced charmingly beautiful by all. The bridesmaid, Miss Nettie Stratton, wore a handsome gown of pale yellow trimmed in lace and ribbon, large picture hat and had a lovely bouquet of pink and red La France roses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. B Stratton, father of the bride, at the conclusion of which the party proceeded to the parsonage, where a sumptuous dejuner was spread. The tables were laden with all the delicacies of the season. The wedding cake, a perfect pyramid of indigestible sweetness, and magnificently ornamented, was the gift of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. T. B. Carmichael, baker and confectioner, of the city of Kingston. The dinner was followed by the usual toasts, which were ably responded to. Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge left on the 6 30 train for a trip through some of the states, and thence to Chicago, where they will be at home in their residence on Ashland avenue after the first of July. The presents to the bride were numerous and costly, including a diamond ring and a beautiful gold watch and chain from the groom. The Watchman joins in extending the usual congratulations on such happy occasions.—Lindsay Watchman.

How He Kept the Snow Apples.
Mr. M. W. SIMKINS, the great Sewing and Knitting Machine man, laid on our table this week some well preserved snow apples. He says he advertised two first-class sewing machines for one price, or one for half-price, in THE BEAVER, when ordered by mail, and Singers for $30, then lined a box with these papers, put in the apples, and covered them with Christian Guardians, and they turned out the 1st of June first-class.
He says he is still selling the best Sewing Machine in the world for less than $40.00, on the instalment system, and out for the Canadian tariff and the Dingley bill. Keep your guns loaded, and your dogs tied handy, or Dingley will have his bill in your pockets and swipe every cent out. And those two pedlars in one wagon with an S. M. on behind, are after you, too—they are asking two prices for every one. Silly people with more money than brains pay them $45 to $60 for S. M.s., while sensible people pay Simkins from $25 to $28 for the same or a better machine, when ordered by mail, and no time lost in hunting you up. He also gives you a straight guarantee for ten years. If you will read your guarantee you will see it is a fraud. M. W. Simkins has found it necessary, after thirty-one years experience, to put a man on the road. He can't find time to see you all.
Mr. F. DAVANA will call on some of you. He will furnish you with the very best Sewing Machine on earth for $26 cash, made of hardened steel, and others for less.
All kinds of Sewing Machines repaired, especially the Singer. I am still on the war-path of competition and for life, and don't you forget it.
Send in your order by mail before Dingley gets after you. Address,
M. W. SIMKINS,
NEWBURGH, ONT.

The Artistic In Dress.

Color has always been a study with Frenchwomen. They are very timid in regard to the use of venturesome hues, as are many American women. They take into consideration the tint and texture of their skin, the color of their eyes and hair and their general type of feature, and then they select such colors as will best set them off to advantage. A Frenchwoman is a master hand in the matter of evolving effects. She gives the choosing of colors deliberate and careful attention, and, moreover, is quick to notice that a shade becoming to her one day under certain conditions may not suit her the next, and so varies the combinations accordingly.
"I have frequently noticed that a hat becoming to the wearer when worn with a gown of a certain make—of course referring to the bodice—loses half its charm when worn with another," says a modiste who devotes hours of time to devising harmonious costumes. "I have not yet thought out the why's and wherefores of this, but I know that it is a fact and is a matter of contour and proportion as much as of color. Just the right amount of contrast suits the wearer's individuality perfectly, it must be considered with relation to her gown as well. I don't mean the wearing of a green hat with a green gown or a gray hat with a gray gown—as long as women stick to one all over color they are safe, if a handsome—but a hat of a certain outline and adornment and a gown of a certain outline and ornament.
"I have been disappointed several times when, as I thought, I had chosen the gown and hat with regard to harmony to find that the tout ensemble was not becoming. A gown with the zouave or bolero effect, either in silver or braided cloth, calls for a very different style of hat from the gown with a straight cut bodice or surplice fronted draped waist. And in the matter of shade or color that makes a woman appear not at her best, but a matter of texture and shape and cut. The style of hairdressing for an evening or dinner toilet should be tried with reference to the style of the gown that is to be worn as much as with regard to the shape of the face.
"There is a great deal to be thought about in the choosing of colors, and no set rules can be given. A shade of red in dull silk or lusterless cloth that kills a woman of a certain type, that dulls her eyes and makes her look sallow, can be worn successfully by the same individual if developed in rich velvet or glossy broadcloth. Certain women maintain that green ruins them, and are in despair because they can't wear it when it is the fashion. I can dress any woman becomingly in green if I can have my pick of textures and shades. A woman who could not wear any of the screaming colors now in vogue (in vogue because the pale Parisian belles of the moment look well in them) could always learn to portray if she chose the right shade. She could not choose it in a minute. She would have to take some pains about it. The woman who begrudges to be well dressed should think out conclusions for herself. To be well dressed does not mean buying and wearing the finest things from the best stores, but selecting such colors and styles and materials as will set off one's particular type to advantage."—New York Sun.

When a man owns a blooded horse he is always careful of its health. He looks after his diet and is particular that the feeding shall be regular and right. While he is doing this it is likely as not that he is himself suffering from some disease or disorder. When the trouble gets so bad that he cannot work, he will begin to give himself the care he gave the horse at the start. Good, pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against disease of any kind. Almost all diseases come from impure or impoverished blood. Keep the blood pure and strong and disease can find no foothold. That is the principle upon which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical discovery works. It cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood, gives and keeps the whole body in perfect order; makes appetite good, digestion strong, assimilation perfect. It brings ruddy, virile health. It builds up solid, wholesome flesh (not fat) when, from any cause, reduced below the healthy standard.

Feminine Nature.

Despite the fact that there are many women clamoring for equal rights with men, despite the fact that we expect to cope with man on his own ground until feminine nature is changed from its foundation. Very few men realize what a tender, sensitive organization lies beneath the fearless, independent air on exhibition for the world to see. The words that would, if uttered in anger, by man forgotten, but the woman feels them keenly long after the first sting has passed away and only a dull, aching memory remains. In this respect, as in many others, he is unequal, just because a woman, not being able to change her disposition, has nothing to rely upon—she makes no head, and the slow tears gather in the woman's eyes even though pride does its best to force them back. Some strong minded woman undoubtedly remarks just here that it is only the namby pamby sisterhood that cannot stand up for their rights without giving way to such purely feminine weakness as crying. We do not mean that women weep in every argument they strive to advance or in every contest that they endeavor to fulfill, but the statement is nevertheless that there will be a time when the armor is certain to be pierced by some little inconsequent nothing—from a man's standpoint—and all the logic, all the backbone, will vanish before a pin prick, though the most furious cannonading of stormy eloquence might merge harmlessly enough about such a result.—Philadelphia Times.

Fashion Notes.

Hats are trimmed high on one side and are worn well forward over the eyes.

Red is much worn at present, but later, it is said, grays and more subdued colors will be seen.

A revival of the early fashion is heralded, but all sorts of grandiose and bizarre are on exhibition.

Voluminous red leads in colors, but elephant's breath, London smoke and robin's egg blue are also represented, along with other familiar hues with new names.

Pique suits for summer will be made in the coat and skirt style; also shirt waists and skirts, the waist being, however, of silk.

The surplice effect is now seen almost as much as the bolero.

Fancy waists of chiffon are fashionably worn with black satin skirts.

Saved Her Drunken Husband

She Finally Administered a Remedy Without his Knowledge, and Cured Him.

A correspondent writes: I had such a happy home and a noble, big-hearted husband till he took to drinking, first through sociability, then because the fiendish desire would come over him, crazing him for drink.
"I was heart-broken. My happy home was fast becoming one of misery till a friend told me to try a liquor cure called Anti-Booze. I was willing to try anything, so I sent $1.00 as she suggested, to the Oriental Chemical Co., 20 St. Alexis St., Montreal, and by return mail I received in a plain wrapper a little box of pills. I put one of these in his coffee every night and morning without him knowing it, (as they dissolve immediately), and in less than a week, to my delight, he stopped drinking entirely.
"Anti-Booze has changed my drunken husband into a sober, industrious, happy man, and I feel it my duty to tell others about it. They will send full information without charge to any who will write them. "J. D. H." 18cm

Shocking Fatality

A very sad and fatal accident occurred at Deseronto on Monday, by which a young man named Charles Allen Vollmar, aged 23 years, lost his life. He was employed on one of the motor engines in the yard, and when he was standing still he reached under to brush away some fire, when by some means the engine started and the driving rod caught his head, tearing off one ear and crushing his neck. When he was picked up life was extinct. He was the only son of Henry McCullough, a farmer, living about two miles west of Deseronto.

East Ward Celebration.

The jubilee celebration of East ward school, announced in our issue last week, came off on Friday afternoon, the 18th inst., and was a complete success. The day was all that could be desired and a goodly number of the parents and friends of the pupils and members of the School Board were in attendance. The lawn presented a most pleasing appearance. Union Jacks were suspended from the door and windows of the school and floated from the trees. Two large pictures of the Queen held a prominent position on either side of the main entrance.

The chair was occupied by Dr. Bissonnette, who also gave a very interesting address, which was well illustrated by the many pictures appreciated by both teachers and pupils.

The following programme was well rendered, showing the careful training of the pupils by the teachers in charge. Many of the selections would have done credit to those of more advanced years.

A JUBILEE ODE.

"She wrought her people lasting good."
—Tennyson.

This gala day, this grand display
For our Queen's fame and glory,
O'er earth's domain her unique reign
Shall live in song and story.

See homage paid in rich parade.
On sea, on land, on town and plain
Proud Britons meet their Queen to greet.
With true heart-felt devotion

On every shore we hear the roar,
Of deep-mouthed British guns,
That loud proclaim the wealth of fame,
Achieved by Britain's sons.

Now, it is seen how our good Queen,
O'erthrown only reigns,
And all revere her kind career,
O'er Britain's broad domains.

On land and sea her sovereignty
Makes peace and safety sure;
Her chain, her rule, where flies the Jack,
Nor slaver can endure.

Now, let us sing, while pauses ring,
Through regions wide and far:
God save the Queen, who long hath been
Our true, our guiding star.

—F. Burnow.

The Little Barefoot.

A large audience greeted the performance of "The Little Barefoot" at the opera house, on Monday evening, and went home delighted. The pupils of St. Mary Magdalene S. S. may well feel proud at the success of the entertainment. Little Blanche Nesbitt played "Barefoot" splendidly, and Rose was also acted finely by Lena Hough. Alice Smith, Marian Leonard, Eva Jennings, Catharine Bartlett and Mabel Bradt-Anderson were perfectly at home in their parts; Gordon Minchinton was very funny as "Jemmy," and C. E. Wilson played William in a masterly manner. Willie Leonard, Bert Canniff and George Drake were also prominent, and Fred Sheppard was an ideal old man. The Serpentine dance was a beautiful and effective affair, and was greatly admired, while "The Men Outwitted" or "The Ladies' Triumph," elicited roars of laughter. The Polsarie class and pictures were very artistic, and with other pictures of a lengthy programme were highly appreciated. Lack of space prevents us giving a more extended notice, or we would be glad to mention several of the young actors who deserved especial praise. Miss Adele Carlton Todd directed the stage, and to her untiring efforts is due the great success of the entertainment.

Presentation.

On Wednesday evening at the close of the League of the Eastern church, the following presentation was made:

MISS ANNIE CLIFF.

Dear Sister and Co-worker,—Learning of your intended departure from our midst, we as members of the Epworth League and Christian Endeavor, of the Eastern Methodist church at Napanee, desire to express our deep regret for the loss which our society will sustain through your absence. We also wish to express in some way our heartfelt gratitude for the services you have always so willingly and generously rendered our League. As an active member you have succeeded in gaining the confidence and esteem of all those with whom you have been connected in Endeavor work, and we feel that your presence among us has left an impression and influence for good amongst us that can never be erased. We believe that by your kind and helpful words, your loving and thoughtful actions, and as much by your noble and praiseworthy example, you have given a true christian inspiration to many a faltering soul, and we deem it a privilege, a true pleasure, but also our duty, at this time, to recognize the value and importance of your earnest work, the true reward of which we feel sure you receive only at the hands of our Heavenly Father. We ask you to accept this writing companion as only a slight token of the love and esteem in which you are held by your fellow-workers in the cause of Christ. We hope it will recall many fond and pleasant associations of your life and experience among us. As you go to your new home and enter a new field of labor we hope that your efforts will be crowned with that success which is your due, and that you may long be spared to continue the good work of winning souls to a higher and happier life. We trust and pray that wherever circumstances may place you, God will shower His richest blessings upon you.

Signed on behalf of the E. L. of C. E.

S. G. HAWLEY, Vice-Pres.

REPLY.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE ENDEAVOR.

This is indeed a great surprise to me, and I hardly know how to express my thanks to you for thus kindly remembering me. Sometimes the heart is too full for speech, and we can only keep a silence more eloquent and expressive than words. My associations with the Endeavor have been of the most pleasant, for nearly thirteen years I have been connected with you in this work, and I can truly say I have received a great deal of benefit from my work in this organization. I shall always have an interest in its welfare and prosperity. It is with regret and sorrow that I contemplate my removal from your midst. Although I look forward to my new life and its experiences with some measure of gladness, yet, I look upon the severance of the old ties, with anything but joy. As a society and as individual members you have helped me not only in my christian experience, but also in bearing and facing the stern realities of life. Your many kind words, and your tender sympathy in the hour of my life's greatest sorrow and trial last winter will not be soon forgotten, and no matter where I go I shall always keep a warm place in my heart for the C. E. society of Eastern Methodist church. Once more let me express my thanks to each and everyone of you for this beautiful companion, and my prayer shall ever be for the success and prosperity of this League and its work.

Parties who do not care for the racing events, a five-for all, 2.30 race, 3 minute race, and half-mile open run, one of the best football matches of the league series will be played between the Deseronto and Napanee clubs. Each organization has a host of admirers, and whichever club wins will have to do so after a life and death struggle. The park is one of the prettiest spots in Canada to hold a demonstration in.

The Work of a Fiend.

Mr. Ira H. Sehell, of Chambers, on whose farm an American company are drilling for coal oil, was in town on Monday. He tell was sunk to a distance of 362 feet, it was decided to enlarge it from an eight inch to a thirteen inch hole. When the work of enlarging commenced the workmen noticed that they were continually striking some hard substance that injured the tools. This continued until they got down to where the eight-inch hole was reduced to five inches. Here the obstruction lodged, and do what they could it could neither be forced down or brought to the surface. Finally an impression was taken of it by forcing a block of wood against it, and it was found to be a piece of highly tempered steel, much harder than the drills with a number of which it collided on which the drills made no impression, but were diverted to the sides of the cavity and finally jammed so that they were with difficulty withdrawn. At last it was decided to explode a small charge of dynamite against the obstruction. This was rather a risky operation, as there was great danger of destroying the casing of the well, but fortunate, it succeeded, and the obstruction was forced into the five-inch hole, where it now is, but in such shape that the drills strike it squarely. It is the intention to continue drilling until the obstruction is worn away. Mr. Sehell thinks that it is probably about six feet in length, and was designed to entirely block operations on the well. A life sentence to the penitentiary would be none too long a term for the guilty party.

Happy is the Small Boy.

Buffalo Bill is returning to Kingston, July 1st, and will be at Belleville, July 2nd, 1897. Now let the small boy save up his pennies in preparation for this great occasion. To him, Buffalo Bill is greater than President or Cabinet, and he would rather see Buffalo Bill's Wild West than celebrate the Fourth of July. However, the small boys of this vicinity will have an opportunity to do both this summer, for all the traffic that can possibly be handled on excursion rates in order to accommodate the throngs who will wish to visit the exhibition. The Wild West is not to be seen again, so all probability will not again be seen in this section of the country, at least for several years. Any one who misses this great marksman's aggregation should not miss the present opportunity.

The Wild West is perhaps the most original amusement enterprise ever put before the public, and for over a dozen years its career has been one continuous round of successes. For three years it has visited Europe several times, and has also toured over the United States with great success. This season, in addition to starting on tour, it exhibited for a month at Madison Square Garden, New York City, where it met with unbounded success, and where thousands of people were turned away, unable to even obtain standing room. The exhibition is given on land in an exact reproduction of that given in New York City. The Indians, Cowboys, Gauchos, Russian Cossacks, Mexicans, Arabs, Mongol Irish Lancers, and Germans, together with the United States artillerymen and cavalrymen, will all perform their evolutions exactly as during their metropolitan engagement. Buffalo Bill (Col. William F. Cody), appears in person at every performance. The original Deadwood Coach, famous in romance in history, is also with the exhibition and one of the exciting features is an attack on the stage coach by a band of wild Indians, who are repulsed by cowboys under the leadership of Buffalo Bill. Annie Oakley, "Little Sure Shot," and Johnnie Baker, both experts with firearms, are also features of the Wild West exhibition. The whole aggregation should be liberally patronized when in this vicinity.

THE YACHT RACES.

A Fine Day, Good Breeze, and an Exciting Contest—The Dauntless, Petrel and Skip Jack win the Prizes.

The Napanee Yacht Club held their first race on Friday afternoon last, and while, no doubt, the result is not satisfactory to all concerned, the yacht owners have a better idea of the merits of their respective craft and the relation they hold to each other in a contest governed by rules on a measured distance. The event had not been properly advertised, many who would have been spectators, not knowing of the races till evening. About one hundred people boarded the different vessels bound for the scene.

There was quite a fleet gathered at the dock at the time of starting. The steamers Reindeer, Jessie Forward, Dauntless, Madge, Orpha, Satisfaction and Skip Jack, and some sailing skiffs. The Petrel had gone out the evening before and placed the buoys. Sharp at 9 o'clock the Reindeer steamed away, and a very pretty sight it was to see the yachts in line all trimmed for racing, and the crews clad in their white yachting costumes. At the brick yard dock a boom of logs was overtaken. The steamer slowing up caused the yachts to foul one another, and for a little while there was a general mix-up, the Reindeer being forced in the mud. About half an hour was lost in straightening out the tangle, when headway was again made and the ground reached without further mishap. No time was lost; the boats at once bearing away for the starting point.

Mr. S. S. Read had been chosen as starter and referee, and Mr. J. L. Boyes timekeeper. At 3.21 the first gun was fired, notifying the racers to get ready. Ten minutes was allowed for this purpose, during which time the yachts hovered about the starting line, running to and fro, getting as near as possible without passing the imaginary line. Sharp at the expiration of this limit the second boom of the gun was heard and the race was on. The Skip Jack had not properly understood the arrangements for starting, and was some 20 yards across the line when the signal was given. She had to come about and round the buoy, thus losing about four minutes. The Satisfaction, Madge and Petrel got off together, making a very pretty start; the Orpha, Dauntless and Skip Jack following in the order named.

The wind was blowing at about a five mile rate, north by west. The Satisfaction led to the second buoy when the Dauntless slipped in and rounded first, the Madge and Petrel being unable to overtake them, followed by the Orpha and Skip Jack. On the leg to the third buoy the wind was very fitful; the Dauntless lost her headway, the Satisfaction almost caught her and laid her to the buoy. The Orpha followed, having overtaken and passed the Madge, the Petrel and Skip Jack bringing up the rear and having an excellent race for the race from that point. The Dauntless, Satisfaction and Orpha took the breeze and got nearly to the first buoy when the wind left them in the lurch. The Madge, Petrel and Skip Jack were a good half mile in the rear. Fortune, however, favored the brave, the latter three getting a slant of wind, that caused them to overhaul the other boats at a great rate, until just as the Dauntless reached the first buoy the wind shifted and increased to a thirty-mile breeze, making all the boats beat up to the buoy, which the Dauntless had rounded and got away on her first leg of the second round at the rate of fifteen miles an hour. Here the superiority of the handling of the Petrel was manifested—taking the wind on her port side, making a leg to the lumber yard, thereby getting a less lee and being able to make the buoy around which she whipped and was away hot after the Dauntless. As the wind struck the Orpha her topsail was taken off, thus causing her to lose her place to the Madge, which was by this time headed over to the cabin windows. At this time the race was at its prettiest, every yacht having all the sail she could carry. The first leg on the second round was made in great time, the Madge only adding a spinnaker, but being handled by a green crew this did not avail her much. She led about 100 yards at the buoy, but in rounding, her mainsheet got away, fouling the spinnaker, and mixing things up generally. By this time the Orpha and Petrel were right upon her, but could not catch her until the third buoy was rounded. The Satisfaction and Skip Jack were straining every sail to lessen the gap between them and the leaders, but they seemed to be sailing in hard luck, and their efforts were of no avail. By this time the Dauntless was almost home, and eventually got there 22 seconds ahead of the Petrel. The last leg of the second round was a beat to windward, and on this the Petrel surprised everybody with her ability in a blow, outfooting and outpointing the Madge and Orpha with ease, and all the time wishing for just a little more wind. She crossed the line four minutes ahead of the Orpha. At this time the Madge was about two lengths ahead of the Orpha and one length to the lee, making finally jammed so that they were with difficulty withdrawn. At last it was decided to explode a small charge of dynamite against the obstruction. This was rather a risky operation, as there was great danger of destroying the casing of the well, but fortunate, it succeeded, and the obstruction was forced into the five-inch hole, where it now is, but in such shape that the drills strike it squarely. It is the intention to continue drilling until the obstruction is worn away. Mr. Sehell thinks that it is probably about six feet in length, and was designed to entirely block operations on the well. At a meeting of the local camp of the Sons of Scotland last Friday evening, Bro. Alex. MacDonald, on behalf of Sr. Bride's Camp, I.O.S., presented Bro. Alfred Alexander, the Financial Secretary, with a written address and a handsome cathedral clock in an ebonized iron frame with bronze and marble ornaments and surmounted by a detached bronze figure. A gilt inscription plate reads: "Alfred Alexander; from St. Bride's Camp, I.O.S. Napanee, June 18th, 1897." Complimentary speeches were made all round and Mr. Alexander made a modest reply, and a number of the enthusiastic Scotchmen went home with a man who is named after Alfred the Great, and Alexander the Great, and put the timepiece up in his house and wished long life and happiness to himself and his good wife, and lots in good humor.

A Freak of Nature.

One of the most peculiar freaks of nature ever seen or heard of in this section came to light on Saturday last. Mr. E. B. Hawkestreet, the jolly old man on the market, has a cat that spends part of her time at the store and part at the house, just as the notion takes her. Old "Min" was not visible on Saturday, but on Sunday she showed up all right, and in her peculiar way invited the family to come to the barn and see her new family, which consisted of four kittens, all smiled, one at the shoulder of another, and the other three at the navel. The one underneath was nearly dead, and it was thought best, in order to strengthen the chances of life in the others, to remove it. Dr. Ming performed the operation. The three are all plump, fair sized animals, and Min is very proud of them. She stands a very good chance of raising them. He, he, how lovely proud of his cat, we are sure.
